bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. North Olmsted City—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. North Olmsted City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, North Olmsted City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to North Olmsted City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified North Olmsted City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but North Olmsted City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, North Olmsted City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. North Olmsted City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against North Olmsted City’s potential claims against them. North Olmsted City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But North Olmsted City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. North Olmsted City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. North Olmsted City is a plaintiff in Ohio. North Olmsted City’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for North Olmsted City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. North Olmsted City filed its amended complaint on March 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of North Olmsted v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46012-DAP, ECF No. 7. It is therefore indisputable that North Olmsted City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. North Olmsted City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. North Olmsted City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. North Olmsted City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

796. City of Euclid v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46013-DAP: Plaintiff Euclid City, Ohio

Euclid City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Euclid City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Euclid City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Euclid City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Euclid City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Euclid City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Euclid City amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 29, 2018. See City of Euclid v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46013-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Euclid City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Euclid City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Euclid City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Euclid City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Furthermore, in 2023, Euclid City filed a separate complaint in this MDL asserting new claims for public nuisance and negligence against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company, n/k/a Evernorth Health, Inc.; Merck-Medco, n/k/a Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; OptumRx, Inc.; and other defendants. See Cuyahoga County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., No. 1:23-op-45003 (N.D. Ohio), ECF No. 1. Euclid City offers no good cause for its failure to bring its proposed claims against all PBMs in the 2023 case, which is still pending. In addition, Euclid City’s improper claim-splitting between these two separate cases in the MDL should be rejected. See Waad, 762

F. App’x at 260–63 (affirming dismissal for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Euclid City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Euclid City—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Euclid City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Euclid City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Euclid City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Euclid City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Euclid City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Euclid City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Euclid City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Euclid City began receiving those services on January 3, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Euclid City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Euclid City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Euclid City's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Euclid City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Euclid City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Euclid City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Euclid City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Euclid City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Euclid City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Euclid City's potential claims against them. Euclid City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Euclid City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Euclid City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Euclid City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Euclid City filed its amended complaint on March 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Euclid v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46013-DAP, ECF No. 7. It is therefore indisputable that Euclid City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Euclid City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Euclid City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Euclid City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

797. City of Olmsted Falls v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46014-DAP: Plaintiff Olmsted Falls City, Ohio

Olmsted Falls City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Olmsted Falls City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Olmsted Falls City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Olmsted Falls City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Olmsted Falls City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Olmsted Falls City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Olmsted Falls City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Olmsted Falls City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Olmsted Falls City filed its amended complaint on March 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Olmsted Falls v. Olmsted Falls City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Olmsted Falls City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

798. City of North Ridgeville v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46015-DAP: Plaintiff North Ridgeville City, Ohio

North Ridgeville City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. North Ridgeville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. North Ridgeville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, North Ridgeville City's motion should be denied due to futility, as North Ridgeville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. North Ridgeville City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, North Ridgeville City amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 30, 2018. See City of North Ridgeville v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46015-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, North Ridgeville City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. North Ridgeville City's deadline to amend was in 2019. North Ridgeville City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. North Ridgeville City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Furthermore, in 2023, North Ridgeville City filed a separate complaint in this MDL asserting new claims for public nuisance and negligence against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company, n/k/a Evernorth Health, Inc.; Merck-Medco, n/k/a Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; OptumRx, Inc.; and other defendants. See Cuyahoga County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., No. 1:23-op-45003 (N.D. Ohio), ECF No. 1. North Ridgeville City offers no good cause for its failure to bring its proposed claims against all PBMs in the 2023 case, which is still pending. In addition, North Ridgeville City’s improper claim-splitting between these two separate cases in the MDL should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (affirming dismissal for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. North Ridgeville City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. North Ridgeville City—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. North Ridgeville City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”);

Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, North Ridgeville City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to North Ridgeville City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified North Ridgeville City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but North Ridgeville City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, North Ridgeville City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. North Ridgeville City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against North Ridgeville City's potential claims against them. North Ridgeville City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017

WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But North Ridgeville City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. North Ridgeville City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. North Ridgeville City is a plaintiff in Ohio. North Ridgeville City’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for North Ridgeville City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. North Ridgeville City filed its amended complaint on March 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of North Ridgeville v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46015-DAP, ECF No. 5. It is therefore indisputable that North Ridgeville City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. North Ridgeville City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. North Ridgeville City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. North Ridgeville City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

799. South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46016-DAP: Plaintiff South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians

South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians' untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians' motion should be denied due to futility, as South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46016-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians’ deadline to amend was in 2019. South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians’ lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46016-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating South Fork Band of the Te-

Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians’ case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians’ document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians’ disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Nevada law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians’ delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Nevada law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. South Fork Band of the Te-

Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians, a native tribe in Nevada, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians’ proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians filed its original complaint on August 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See South Fork Band of the Te-Moak Tribe of Western Shoshone Indians v. 801. Alleghany County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46019-DAP: Plaintiff Alleghany County, North Carolina

Alleghany County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Alleghany County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Alleghany County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Alleghany County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Alleghany County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Alleghany County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Alleghany County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 4, 2018. See Alleghany County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46019-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Alleghany County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Alleghany County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Alleghany County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Alleghany County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Alleghany County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Alleghany County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Alleghany County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Alleghany County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.47% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Alleghany County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Alleghany County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

802. Makah Indian Tribe v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46022-DAP: Plaintiff Makah Indian Tribe, Washington

Makah Indian Tribe’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Makah Indian Tribe failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Makah Indian Tribe also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Makah Indian Tribe’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Makah Indian Tribe does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Makah Indian Tribe was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Makah Indian Tribe amended its complaint on August 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 4, 2018, as well as on December 24, 2020. See Makah Indian Tribe v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46022-DAP, ECF Nos. 24, 27. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Makah Indian Tribe to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Makah Indian Tribe's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Makah Indian Tribe, a native tribe in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Makah Indian Tribe's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Makah Indian Tribe filed its original complaint on August 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Makah Indian Tribe v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46022-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Makah Indian Tribe knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Makah Indian Tribe's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Makah Indian Tribe's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Makah Indian Tribe’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Makah Indian Tribe sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 14, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Makah Indian Tribe, a native tribe in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

803. Jefferson County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46023-DAP: Plaintiff Jefferson County, Washington

Jefferson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jefferson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Jefferson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Jefferson County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Jefferson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Jefferson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Jefferson County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 4, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019 and February 11, 2021. See Jefferson County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46023-DAP, ECF Nos. 24, 27, 31. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Jefferson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Jefferson County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Jefferson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Jefferson County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

(0.31% market share for Jefferson County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Jefferson County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Jefferson County filed its original complaint on August 14, 2018. See Jefferson County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46023-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Jefferson County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Jefferson County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Jefferson County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Jefferson County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Jefferson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Jefferson County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Jefferson County, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Jefferson County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Jefferson County filed its original complaint on August 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Jefferson County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46023-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Jefferson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Jefferson County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Jefferson County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Jefferson County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Jefferson County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 14, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Jefferson County, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

804. City of Hamilton, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46024-DAP: Plaintiff Hamilton City, Ohio

Hamilton City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hamilton City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hamilton City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs.

Moreover, Hamilton City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Hamilton City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hamilton City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hamilton City amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 4, 2018. See City of Hamilton, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46024-DAP, ECF No. 24. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hamilton City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Hamilton City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Hamilton City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hamilton City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Hamilton City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Hamilton City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Hamilton City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Hamilton City filed its original complaint on August 14, 2018. See City of Hamilton, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46024-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Hamilton City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Hamilton City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Hamilton City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Hamilton City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Hamilton City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Hamilton City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Hamilton City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Hamilton City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hamilton City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hamilton City filed its original complaint on August 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Hamilton, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-

Hamilton City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hamilton City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

805. City of Ironton, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46025-DAP: Plaintiff Ironton City, Ohio

Ironton City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ironton City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ironton City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ironton City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Ironton City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

806. Moore County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46028-DAP: Plaintiff Moore County, North Carolina

Moore County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Moore County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Moore County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Moore County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Moore County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

807. City of Kansas City, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46029-DAP: Plaintiff City of Kansas City, Missouri

City of Kansas City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. City of Kansas City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. City of Kansas City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, City of Kansas City's motion should be denied due to futility, as City of Kansas City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. City of Kansas City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, City of Kansas City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 4, 2018. *See City of Kansas City, Missouri v. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for City of Kansas City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. City of Kansas City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified City of Kansas City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and City of Kansas City began receiving those services on February 6, 2008. See id. Inasmuch as City of Kansas City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), City of Kansas City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. City of Kansas City's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the Despite filing its case years ago, City of Kansas City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating City of Kansas City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of City of Kansas City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by City of Kansas City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and City of Kansas City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, City of Kansas City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to City of Kansas City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified City of Kansas City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but City of Kansas City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, City of Kansas City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. City of Kansas City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against City of Kansas City's potential claims against them. City of Kansas City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But City of Kansas City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. City of Kansas City, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for City of Kansas City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. City of Kansas City filed its original complaint on August 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Kansas City, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46029-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that City of Kansas City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. City of Kansas City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. City of Kansas City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. City of Kansas City, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

808. Cumberland County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46031-DAP: Plaintiff Cumberland County, North Carolina

Cumberland County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cumberland County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cumberland County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cumberland County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Cumberland County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cumberland County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cumberland County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 4, 2018. See Cumberland County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46031-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cumberland County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Cumberland County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Cumberland County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cumberland County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Cumberland County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Cumberland County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Cumberland County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Cumberland County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Cumberland County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cumberland County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Cumberland County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cumberland County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Cumberland County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Cumberland County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Cumberland County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Cumberland County filed its original complaint on August 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Cumberland County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46031-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Cumberland County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Cumberland County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Cumberland County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Cumberland County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

809. County of San Bernardino et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46032-DAP: Plaintiff San Bernardino County, California

San Bernardino County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. San Bernardino County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. San Bernardino County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, San Bernardino County's motion should be denied due to futility, as San Bernardino County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. San Bernardino County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, San Bernardino County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 4, 2018. See County of San Bernardino et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46032-DAP, ECF No. 17. Unlike many other plaintiffs, San Bernardino County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. San Bernardino County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. San Bernardino County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. San Bernardino County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

(0.13% market share for San Bernardino County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for San Bernardino County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.37% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for San Bernardino County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. San Bernardino County filed its original complaint on July 19, 2018. See County of San Bernardino et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46032-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, San Bernardino County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating San Bernardino County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of San Bernardino County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. San Bernardino County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

810. Oneida Nation v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46034-DAP: Plaintiff Oneida Nation, Wisconsin

Oneida Nation's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Oneida Nation failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Oneida Nation also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Oneida Nation's motion should be denied due to futility, as Oneida Nation does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Oneida Nation was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Oneida Nation amended its complaint on March 10, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL, as well as on August 13, 2019. See Oneida Nation v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46034-DAP, ECF Nos. 3, 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Oneida Nation declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Oneida Nation’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Oneida Nation waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Oneida Nation’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Oneida Nation cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Oneida Nation, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Oneida Nation fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Oneida Nation’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Oneida Nation, a native tribe in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Oneida Nation’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Oneida Nation filed its original complaint on September 4, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Oneida Nation v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46034-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Oneida Nation knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Oneida Nation's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Oneida Nation's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Oneida Nation, a native tribe in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

811. Township of Painesville v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46035-DAP: Plaintiff Painesville Township, Ohio

Painesville Township's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Painesville Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Painesville Township also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Painesville Township's motion should be denied due to futility, as Painesville Township does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Painesville Township was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above.

Moreover, Painesville Township amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 4, 2018. See Township of Painesville v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46035-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Painesville Township declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Painesville Township's deadline to amend was in 2019. Painesville Township waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Painesville Township's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Furthermore, in 2023, Painesville Township filed a separate complaint in this MDL asserting new claims for public nuisance and negligence against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company, n/k/a Evernorth Health, Inc.; Merck-Medco, n/k/a Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; OptumRx, Inc.; and other defendants. See Cuyahoga County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., No. 1:23-op-45003 (N.D. Ohio), ECF No. 1. Painesville Township offers no good cause for its failure to bring its proposed claims against all PBMs in the 2023 case, which is still pending. In addition, Painesville Township's improper claim-splitting between these two separate cases in the MDL should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (affirming dismissal for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were "duplicative of and improperly split" from an earlier-filed case).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Painesville Township cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Painesville Township—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Painesville Township fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Painesville Township failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Painesville Township’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Painesville Township of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Painesville Township refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Painesville Township's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Painesville Township's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Painesville Township's potential claims against them. Painesville Township's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Painesville Township's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Painesville Township, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Painesville Township is a plaintiff in Ohio. Painesville Township's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Painesville Township’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Painesville Township filed its original complaint on July 26, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Township of Painesville v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46035-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Painesville Township first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on July 26, 2022. Painesville Township’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Painesville Township’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Painesville Township, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

812. Sarpy County, Nebraska v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46038-DAP: Plaintiff Sarpy County, Nebraska

Sarpy County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sarpy County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sarpy County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sarpy County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sarpy County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sarpy County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sarpy County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 5, 2018. See Sarpy County, Nebraska v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46038-DAP, ECF No. 13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sarpy County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sarpy County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Sarpy County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sarpy County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Nebraska law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sarpy County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Nebraska law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sarpy County, a municipality in Nebraska, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sarpy County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sarpy County filed its original complaint on August 15, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Sarpy County, Nebraska v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46038-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sarpy County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Sarpy County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sarpy County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Nebraska, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Sarpy County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Sarpy County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 15, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sarpy County, a municipality in Nebraska, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

813. City of Palmetto v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46055-DAP: Plaintiff Palmetto City, Florida

Palmetto City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Palmetto City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Palmetto City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Palmetto City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Palmetto City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Palmetto City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Palmetto City amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 12, 2018. See City of Palmetto v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46055-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Palmetto City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Palmetto City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Palmetto City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Palmetto City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Palmetto City filed its original complaint on August 16, 2018. See City of Palmetto v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46055-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Palmetto City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Palmetto City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Palmetto City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Palmetto City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Palmetto City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Palmetto City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Palmetto City, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Palmetto City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Palmetto City filed its original complaint on August 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Palmetto v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46055-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Palmetto City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Palmetto City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Palmetto City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Palmetto City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 16, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Palmetto City, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

814. City of Kingman v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46057-DAP: Plaintiff Kingman City, Arizona

Kingman City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kingman City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kingman City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kingman City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Kingman City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Kingman City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Kingman City amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 12, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 29, 2020. See City of Kingman v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46057-DAP, ECF Nos. 25, 26. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Kingman City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Kingman City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Kingman City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Kingman City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Kingman City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.09% market share for Kingman City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kingman City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Kingman City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.27% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kingman City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Kingman City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Kingman City filed its original complaint on August 16, 2018, but waited until September 9, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—six years later. See City of Kingman v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46057-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 9, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Arizona law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Kingman City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Arizona law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. 815. St. Charles County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46059-DAP: Plaintiff St. Charles County, Missouri

St. Charles County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Charles County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Charles County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Charles County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Charles County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Charles County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. St. Charles County filed its original complaint on August 20, 2018. See St. Charles County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46059-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, St. Charles County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But St. Charles County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. St. Charles County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. Charles County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

816. Board of County Commissioners of Washington County, Maryland v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, Case No. 1:18-op-46060-DAP: Plaintiff Washington County, Maryland

Washington County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Washington County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Washington County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Washington County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Washington County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Washington County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Washington County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 13, 2018. See Board of County Commissioners of Washington County, Maryland v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, Case No. 1:18-op-46060-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Washington County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Washington County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Washington County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Washington County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Washington County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Washington County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Washington County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Washington County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Washington County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Washington County began receiving those services on July 1, 2010. See id. Inasmuch as Washington County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Washington County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Washington County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maryland law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Washington County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maryland law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Washington County, a municipality in Maryland, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Washington County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Washington County filed its original complaint on August 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of County Commissioners of Washington County, Maryland v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, Case No. 1:18-op-46060-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Washington County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Washington County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Washington County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Maryland, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Washington County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Washington County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 21, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Washington County, a municipality in Maryland, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

817. Adams County et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46062-DAP: Plaintiff Adams County, Idaho

Adams County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Adams County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Adams County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Adams County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Adams County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Adams County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Adams County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 13, 2018. See Adams County et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46062-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Adams County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Adams County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Adams County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Adams County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Adams County filed its original complaint on August 17, 2018. See Adams County et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46062-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Adams County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Adams County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Adams County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Adams County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Adams County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Idaho law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Adams County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Idaho law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Blaine County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Blaine County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Blaine County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Blaine County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Blaine County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Blaine County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Blaine County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

It is therefore indisputable that Elmore County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Elmore County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Elmore County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Elmore County, a municipality in Idaho, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

822. Adams County et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46062-DAP: Plaintiff Latah County, Idaho

Latah County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Latah County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Latah County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Latah County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Latah County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Latah County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Latah County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 13, 2018. See Adams County et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46062-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Latah County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Latah County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Latah County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Latah County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Latah County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Latah County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Latah County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Idaho law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Latah County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Idaho law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Latah County, a municipality in Idaho, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Latah County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Latah County filed its original complaint on August 17, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Adams County et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46062-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Latah County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Latah County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Latah County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Latah County, a municipality in Idaho, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

823. Bland County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46065-DAP: Plaintiff Bland County, Virginia

Bland County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bland County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bland County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bland County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Bland County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bland County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bland County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 17, 2018. See Bland County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46065-DAP, ECF No. 17. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bland County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Bland County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Bland County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bland County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Bland County filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018. See Bland County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46065-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Bland County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Bland County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Bland County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Bland County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Bland County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Bland County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Bland County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Bland County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Bland County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Bland County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Bland County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Bland County’s potential claims against them. Bland County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bland County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bland County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bland County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bland County filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Bland County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46065-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Bland County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Bland County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bland County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bland County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

824. Madison County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46067-DAP: Plaintiff Madison County, North Carolina

Madison County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Madison County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Madison County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Madison County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Madison County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Madison County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Madison County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 18, 2018. See Madison County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46067-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Madison County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Madison County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Madison County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Madison County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Madison County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Madison County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Madison County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Madison County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Madison County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Madison County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Madison County filed its original complaint on August 23, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Madison County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46067-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Madison County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Madison County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Madison County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Madison County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

825. Carroll County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46068-DAP: Plaintiff Carroll County, Virginia

Carroll County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Carroll County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Carroll County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Carroll County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Carroll County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Carroll County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Carroll County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 18, 2018. See Carroll County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46068-DAP, ECF No. 17. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Carroll County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Carroll County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Carroll County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Carroll County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Carroll County filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018, but waited until December 6, 2018 to implement a litigation hold. See Carroll County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46068-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 6, 2018). Carroll County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Carroll County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Carroll County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Carroll County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Carroll County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Carroll County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Carroll County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Carroll County’s potential claims against them. Carroll County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Carroll County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Carroll County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Carroll County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Carroll County filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Carroll County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46068-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Carroll County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Carroll County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Carroll County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

826. Grayson County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46069-DAP: Plaintiff Grayson County, Virginia

Grayson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Grayson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Grayson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Grayson County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Grayson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Grayson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Grayson County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 18, 2018. *See Grayson County, Virginia v. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Grayson County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Grayson County filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018. See Grayson County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46069-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Grayson County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Grayson County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Grayson County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Grayson County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Grayson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Grayson County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Grayson County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Grayson County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Grayson County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Grayson County filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Grayson County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46069-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Grayson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Grayson County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Grayson County’s request for leave to amend to add a

RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Grayson County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

827. Yancey County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46071-DAP: Plaintiff Yancey County, North Carolina

Yancey County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Yancey County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Yancey County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Yancey County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Yancey County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Yancey County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Yancey County amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 18, 2018. See Yancey County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46071-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Yancey County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Yancey County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Yancey County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Yancey County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Yancey County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Yancey County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Yancey County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Yancey County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Yancey County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Yancey County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Yancey County filed its original complaint on August 23, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Yancey County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46071-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Yancey County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Yancey County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period.

ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Yancey County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Yancey County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

828. Wythe County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46072-DAP: Plaintiff Wythe County, Virginia

Wythe County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wythe County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wythe County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wythe County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wythe County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wythe County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wythe County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 18, 2018. See Wythe County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46072-DAP, ECF No. 16. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wythe County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wythe County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Wythe County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wythe County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

(0.05% market share for Wythe County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Wythe County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wythe County filed its original complaint on July 19, 2018. See Wythe County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46072-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wythe County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Wythe County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wythe County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wythe County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wythe County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Wythe County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Wythe County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Wythe County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Wythe County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Wythe County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Wythe County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Wythe County’s potential claims against them. Wythe County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

829. Russell County, Virginia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46073-DAP: Plaintiff Russell County, Virginia

Russell County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Russell County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Russell County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Russell County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Russell County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Russell County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Russell County filed its original complaint on July 10, 2018. *See Russell County, Virginia v. 830. Scott County Board of Supervisors v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46074-DAP: Plaintiff Scott County, Virginia

Scott County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Scott County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Scott County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Scott County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Scott County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

831. Pulaski County Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46076-DAP: Plaintiff Pulaski County, Virginia

Pulaski County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pulaski County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pulaski County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pulaski County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Pulaski County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pulaski County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pulaski County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 18, 2018. See Pulaski County Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46076-DAP, ECF No. 16. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pulaski County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pulaski County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Pulaski County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pulaski County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Pulaski County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.47% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pulaski County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Pulaski County filed its original complaint on July 16, 2018, but waited until December 3, 2018 to implement a litigation hold. See Pulaski County Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46076-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 3, 2018). Pulaski County’s violation of the Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Pulaski County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Pulaski County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Pulaski County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Pulaski County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Pulaski County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Pulaski County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Pulaski County’s potential claims against them. Pulaski County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pulaski County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pulaski County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Pulaski County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Pulaski County filed its original complaint on July 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Pulaski County Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46076-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Pulaski County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Pulaski County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Pulaski County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pulaski County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

832. Smyth County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46077-DAP: Plaintiff Smyth County, Virginia

Smyth County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Smyth County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Smyth County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Smyth County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Smyth County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Smyth County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Smyth County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 18, 2018. See Smyth County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46077-DAP, ECF No. 17. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Smyth County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Smyth County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Smyth County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Smyth County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Smyth County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Smyth County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Smyth County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Smyth County filed its original complaint on June 28, 2018, but waited until December 13, 2018 to implement a litigation hold. See Smyth County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46077-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2018). Smyth County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Under this Court's orders, Smyth County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Smyth County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Smyth County's potential claims against them. Smyth County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Smyth County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Smyth County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

833. Wyandot County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46078-DAP: Plaintiff Wyandot County, Ohio

Wyandot County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wyandot County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wyandot County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wyandot County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wyandot County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wyandot County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wyandot County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Wyandot County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46078-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wyandot County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wyandot County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Wyandot County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wyandot County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Wyandot County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Wyandot County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Wyandot County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

too low to support a finding of good cause for Wyandot County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wyandot County filed its original complaint on September 18, 2018. See Wyandot County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46078-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wyandot County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Wyandot County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wyandot County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wyandot County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wyandot County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wyandot County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wyandot County, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Wyandot County is a plaintiff in Ohio. Wyandot County’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Wyandot County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Wyandot County filed its original complaint on September 18, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Wyandot County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46078-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Wyandot County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Wyandot County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Wyandot County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wyandot County, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

834. Carroll County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46079-DAP: Plaintiff Carroll County, Ohio

Carroll County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Carroll County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Carroll County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Carroll County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Carroll County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Carroll County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Carroll County). Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Carroll County, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

835. City of Clanton, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46084-DAP: Plaintiff Clanton City, Alabama

Clanton City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Clanton City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Clanton City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Clanton City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Clanton City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Clanton City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Clanton City amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 24, 2018. See City of Clanton, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46084-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Clanton City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Clanton City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Clanton City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Clanton City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Clanton City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Clanton City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Clanton City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Clanton City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Clanton City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Clanton City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Clanton City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Clanton City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Clanton City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Clanton City filed its original complaint on August 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Clanton, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46084-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Clanton City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Clanton City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Clanton City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Clanton City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Clanton City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 27, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Clanton City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

836. City of Brockton, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46089-DAP: Plaintiff Brockton City, Massachusetts

Brockton City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Brockton City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Brockton City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Brockton City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Brockton City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Brockton City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Brockton City amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 24, 2018. See City of Brockton, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46089-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Brockton City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Brockton City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Brockton City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Brockton City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Brockton City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Brockton City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Brockton City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Brockton City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Brockton City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Brockton City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.07% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Brockton City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Brockton City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Brockton City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Brockton City began receiving those services on July 24, 2007. See id. Inasmuch as Brockton City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Brockton City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Brockton City's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Brockton City filed its original complaint on September 4, 2018. See City of Brockton, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46089-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Brockton City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Brockton City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Brockton City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Brockton City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Brockton City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Brockton City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Brockton City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Brockton City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Brockton City filed its original complaint on September 4, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Brockton, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46089-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Brockton City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Brockton City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Brockton City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Brockton City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Brockton City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on September 4, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Brockton City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

837. Town of Kingston, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46090-DAP: Plaintiff Kingston Town, Massachusetts

Kingston Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kingston Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kingston Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kingston Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Kingston Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Kingston Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al.*, Case No. 1:18-op-46090-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Kingston Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Kingston Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Kingston Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Kingston Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Kingston Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Kingston Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

838. City of Eureka et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46092-DAP: Plaintiff Eureka City, California

Eureka City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Eureka City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Eureka City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Eureka City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Eureka City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Eureka City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Eureka City amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 24, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 22, 2020. *See City of Eureka et al. v. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Eureka City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Eureka City, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

839. Town of Walpole, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46093-DAP: Plaintiff Walpole Town, Massachusetts

Walpole Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Walpole Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Walpole Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Walpole Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Walpole Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Walpole Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Walpole Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 24, 2018. See Town of Walpole, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46093-DAP, ECF No. 13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Walpole Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Walpole Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Walpole Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Walpole Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Walpole Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Walpole Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Walpole Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Walpole Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.005% market share for Walpole Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Walpole Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Walpole Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Walpole Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Walpole Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Walpole Town filed its original complaint on September 4, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Walpole, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46093-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Walpole Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Walpole Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Walpole Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Walpole Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Walpole Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on September 4, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Walpole Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

840. Mercer County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46094-DAP: Plaintiff Mercer County, Ohio

Mercer County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mercer County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mercer County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mercer County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Mercer County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Mercer County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Mercer County amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Mercer County Board of County Commissioners v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46094-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Mercer County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Mercer County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Mercer County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mercer County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Mercer County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Mercer County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Mercer County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See,

e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. (0.26% market share for Mercer County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Mercer County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Mercer County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Mercer County is a plaintiff in Ohio. Mercer County’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Mercer County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Mercer County filed its original complaint on September 24, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Mercer County Board of County Commissioners v. Mercer County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Mercer County, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

841. Town of Falmouth v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46095-DAP: Plaintiff Falmouth Town, Massachusetts

Falmouth Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Falmouth Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Falmouth Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover,

Falmouth Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Falmouth Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Falmouth Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Falmouth Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 25, 2018. *See Town of Falmouth v. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Falmouth Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Falmouth Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Falmouth Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Falmouth Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Falmouth Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Branch County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Branch County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Branch County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Branch County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Branch County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Branch County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Branch County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 25, 2018. See Branch County, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46096-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Branch County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Branch County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Branch County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Branch County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Branch County filed its original complaint on August 30, 2018, but waited until December 1, 2018 to implement a litigation hold. See Branch County, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46096-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 1, 2018). Branch County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Longmeadow Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Longmeadow Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 31, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Longmeadow Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

844. Fiscal Court of Wolfe County, Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46099-DAP: Plaintiff Wolfe County, Kentucky

Wolfe County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wolfe County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wolfe County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wolfe County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wolfe County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wolfe County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wolfe County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Fiscal Court of Wolfe County, Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46099-DAP, ECF No. 23. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wolfe County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wolfe County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Wolfe County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wolfe County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wolfe County filed its original complaint on September 26, 2018. See Fiscal Court of Wolfe County, Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46099-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wolfe County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Wolfe County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wolfe County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wolfe County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wolfe County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kentucky law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wolfe County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kentucky law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wolfe County, a municipality in Kentucky, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Wolfe County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Wolfe County filed its original complaint on September 26, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Fiscal Court of Wolfe County, Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46099-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Wolfe County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Wolfe County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Wolfe County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wolfe County, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

845. Fiscal Court of Lee County, Kentucky v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46100-DAP: Plaintiff Lee County, Kentucky

Lee County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lee County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lee County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lee County filed its original complaint on September 26, 2018. *See Fiscal Court of Lee County, Kentucky v. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lee County, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

846. Town of West Bridgewater v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46102-DAP: Plaintiff West Bridgewater Town, Massachusetts

West Bridgewater Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. West Bridgewater Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. West Bridgewater Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, West Bridgewater Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as West Bridgewater Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. West Bridgewater Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, West Bridgewater Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 27, 2018. See Town of West Bridgewater v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46102-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, West Bridgewater Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. West Bridgewater Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. West Bridgewater Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. West Bridgewater Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. West Bridgewater Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. West Bridgewater Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. West Bridgewater Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to West Bridgewater Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, West Bridgewater Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But West Bridgewater Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. West Bridgewater Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for West Bridgewater Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. West Bridgewater Town filed its original complaint on August 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of West Bridgewater v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46102-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that West Bridgewater Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. West Bridgewater Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. West Bridgewater Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. West Bridgewater Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because West Bridgewater Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 31, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. West Bridgewater Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

847. Bacon County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46105-DAP: Plaintiff Bacon County, Georgia

Bacon County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bacon County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bacon County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bacon County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Bacon County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bacon County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bacon County filed its original complaint on September 7, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 27, 2018. See Bacon County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46105-DAP, ECF No. 6. Bacon County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bacon County elected not to do so. Instead, Bacon County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bacon County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Bacon County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Bacon County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bacon County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Bacon County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bacon County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bacon County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bacon County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bacon County filed its original complaint on September 7, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Bacon County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46105-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Bacon County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on September 7, 2022. Bacon County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bacon County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bacon County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

848. Pierce County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46107-DAP: Plaintiff Pierce County, Georgia

Pierce County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pierce County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pierce County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pierce County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Pierce County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pierce County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pierce County filed its original complaint on September 7, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 28, 2018. See Pierce County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46107-DAP, ECF No. 5. Pierce County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pierce County elected not to do so. Instead, Pierce County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pierce County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the (0.05% market share for Pierce County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pierce County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pierce County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Failure to State a Claim. Pierce County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Pierce County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Pierce County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, et al., No. 1:18-op-46107-DAP; and Bennett v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45166-DAP. Pierce County’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were "duplicative of and improperly split" from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Pierce County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Pierce County filed its original complaint on September 7, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Pierce County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46107-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Pierce County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on September 7, 2022. Pierce County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. Pierce County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pierce County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

849. City of Strongsville v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46111-DAP: Plaintiff Strongsville City, Ohio

Strongsville City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Strongsville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Strongsville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Strongsville City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Strongsville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Strongsville City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Strongsville City amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 28, 2018. See City of Strongsville v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46111-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Strongsville City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Strongsville City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Strongsville City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Strongsville City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Furthermore, in 2023, Strongsville City filed a separate complaint in this MDL asserting new claims for public nuisance and negligence against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company, n/k/a Evernorth Health, Inc.; Merck-Medco, n/k/a Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; OptumRx, Inc.; and other defendants. See Cuyahoga County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., No. 1:23-op-45003 (N.D. Ohio), ECF No. 1. Strongsville City offers no good cause for its failure to bring its proposed claims against all PBMs in the 2023 case, which is still pending. In addition, Strongsville City’s improper claim-splitting between these two separate cases in the MDL should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (affirming dismissal for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Strongsville City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Strongsville City—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Strongsville City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

too low to support a finding of good cause for Strongsville City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Strongsville City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Strongsville City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Strongsville City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Strongsville City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Strongsville City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Strongsville City filed its original complaint on August 28, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Strongsville v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46111-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Strongsville City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on August 28, 2022. Strongsville City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Strongsville City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Strongsville City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

850. City of Demorest, Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46113-DAP: Plaintiff Demorest City, Georgia

Demorest City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Demorest City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Demorest City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Demorest City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Demorest City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Demorest City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Demorest City filed its original complaint on September 7, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on October 2, 2018. See City of Demorest, Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46113-DAP, ECF No. 4. Demorest City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Demorest City elected not to do so. Instead, Demorest City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Demorest City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Demorest City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Demorest City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Demorest City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Demorest City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Demorest City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Demorest City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Demorest City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Demorest City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Demorest City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Demorest City’s potential claims against them. Demorest City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Demorest City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Demorest City, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Demorest City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Demorest City filed its original complaint on September 7, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Demorest, Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46113-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Demorest City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on September 7, 2022. Demorest City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Demorest City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Demorest City, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

851. Habersham County Medical Center v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46114-DAP: Plaintiff Habersham County Medical Center, Georgia

Habersham County Medical Center's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Habersham County Medical Center failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Habersham County Medical Center also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Habersham County Medical Center's motion should be denied due to futility, as Habersham County Medical Center does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Habersham County Medical Center was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section

II.A, above. Moreover, Habersham County Medical Center filed its original complaint on September 7, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on October 2, 2018. See Habersham County Medical Center v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46114-DAP, ECF No. 4. Habersham County Medical Center could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Habersham County Medical Center elected not to do so. Instead, Habersham County Medical Center waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Habersham County Medical Center’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Habersham County Medical Center’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Habersham County Medical Center, a hospital in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Habersham County Medical Center’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Habersham County Medical Center filed its original complaint on September 7, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Habersham County Medical Center v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46114-DAP, ECF No. 1. Habersham County Medical Center’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Habersham County Medical Center, a hospital in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

852. Glynn County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46115-DAP: Plaintiff Glynn County, Georgia

Glynn County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Glynn County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Glynn County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Glynn County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Glynn County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Glynn County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Glynn County amended its complaint twice—on March 15, 2019 and March 18, 2019—after directly filing in the MDL on October 16, 2018. See Glynn County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46115-DAP, ECF Nos. 25, 26. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Glynn County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Glynn County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Glynn County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Glynn County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Glynn County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Glynn County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Glynn County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Glynn County filed its original complaint on October 16, 2018. See Glynn County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46115-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Glynn County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Glynn County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Glynn County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Glynn County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Glynn County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Glynn County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Glynn County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Glynn County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Glynn County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Glynn County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Glynn County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Glynn County's potential claims against them. Glynn County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Glynn County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Glynn County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Glynn County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Glynn County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P., et al., No. 1:18-op-46115-DAP; and Jump v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45155-DAP. Glynn County's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Glynn County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Glynn County filed its original complaint on October 16, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Glynn County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46115-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Glynn County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Glynn County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Glynn County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Glynn County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

853. Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46116-DAP: Plaintiff Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians, Wisconsin

Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians' untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians' motion should be denied due to futility, as Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians filed its original complaint on April 13, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on October 4, 2018. See Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46116-DAP, ECF No. 12. Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians elected not to do so. Instead, Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians' lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she]

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians filed its original complaint on April 13, 2018. See Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46116-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians’ case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians’ document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians’ disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians’ delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians, a native tribe in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians’ proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians filed its original complaint on April 13, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46116-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on April 13, 2022. Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians’ RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Red Cliff

Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians' request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Red Cliff Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians, a native tribe in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

854. Borough of Ridgefield v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46117-DAP: Plaintiff Ridgefield Borough, New Jersey

Ridgefield Borough's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ridgefield Borough failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ridgefield Borough also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ridgefield Borough's motion should be denied due to futility, as Ridgefield Borough does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ridgefield Borough was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ridgefield Borough amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 4, 2018. See Borough of Ridgefield v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46117-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ridgefield Borough declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Ridgefield Borough's deadline to amend was in 2019. Ridgefield Borough waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ridgefield Borough's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Ridgefield Borough cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Ridgefield Borough—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Ridgefield Borough fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Ridgefield Borough’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Ridgefield Borough cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Ridgefield Borough violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Ridgefield Borough filed its original complaint on November 8, 2017, but waited until September 7, 2018 to implement a litigation hold—nearly ten months later. See Borough of Ridgefield v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46117-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 7, 2018). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Ridgefield Borough's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Ridgefield Borough's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Ridgefield Borough's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Ridgefield Borough therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Ridgefield Borough failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Ridgefield Borough’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Ridgefield Borough of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Ridgefield Borough refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Ridgefield Borough’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Ridgefield Borough’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Ridgefield Borough’s potential claims against them. Ridgefield Borough’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Jersey law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Ridgefield Borough’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Jersey law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Ridgefield Borough, a municipality in New Jersey, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Ridgefield Borough's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Ridgefield Borough filed its original complaint on November 8, 2017, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Borough of Ridgefield v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46117-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Ridgefield Borough first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on November 8, 2021. Ridgefield Borough's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Ridgefield Borough's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ridgefield Borough, a municipality in New Jersey, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

855. Levy County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46119-DAP: Plaintiff Levy County, Florida

Levy County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Levy County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Levy County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Levy County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Levy County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Levy County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Levy County amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 4, 2018. See Levy County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46119-DAP, ECF No. 36. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Levy County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Levy County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Levy County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Levy County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Levy County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Levy County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Levy County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Levy County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Levy County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Levy County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Levy County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Levy County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1

(emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Levy County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Levy County’s potential claims against them. Levy County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Levy County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Levy County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Filed a Separate PBM Case. Levy County previously filed an opioid case outside the MDL against the PBMs on March 17, 2023. See Palm Beach County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., Case No. 9:23-cv-80431 (S.D. Fla.), ECF No. 1. Levy County also voluntarily dismissed its claims against the PBMs in that case. Id., ECF Nos. 199, 200, 202, 203. By suing the PBMs outside the MDL in 2023, Levy County shows that it possessed facts to assert claims against the PBMs before it moved to amend in the MDL, precluding a showing of good cause here. See

Profitt, 2024 WL 3622448, at *4 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff previously possessed documents showing underlying factual basis for proposed claim).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Levy County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Levy County filed its original complaint on April 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Levy County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46119-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Levy County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on April 9, 2022. Levy County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Levy County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Levy County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Levy County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on April 9, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Levy County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

856. Palm Beach County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46121-DAP: Plaintiff Palm Beach County, Florida

Palm Beach County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Palm Beach County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Palm Beach County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Palm Beach County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Palm Beach County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Palm Beach County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Palm Beach County amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 4, 2018. See Palm Beach County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46121-DAP, ECF No. 18. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Palm Beach County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Palm Beach County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Palm Beach County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Palm Beach County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Palm Beach County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Palm Beach County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Palm Beach County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Palm Beach County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Palm Beach County filed its original complaint on April 5, 2018, but waited until November 5, 2018 to implement a litigation hold—seven months later. See Palm Beach County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46121-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: November 5, 2018). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Palm Beach County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Palm Beach County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Palm Beach County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Palm Beach County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Palm Beach County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Palm Beach County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Filed a Separate PBM Case. Palm Beach County previously filed an opioid case outside the MDL against the PBMs on March 17, 2023. See Palm Beach County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., Case No. 9:23-cv-80431 (S.D. Fla.), ECF No. 1. Palm Beach County also voluntarily dismissed its claims against the PBMs in that case. Id., ECF Nos. 199, 200, 202, 203. By suing the PBMs outside the MDL in 2023, Palm Beach County shows that it possessed facts to assert claims against the PBMs before it moved to amend in the MDL, precluding a showing of good cause here. See Profitt, 2024 WL 3622448, at *4 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff previously possessed documents showing underlying factual basis for proposed claim).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Palm Beach County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Palm Beach County filed its original complaint on April 5, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Palm Beach County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46121-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Palm Beach County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Palm Beach County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Palm Beach County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Palm Beach County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Palm Beach County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on April 5, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Palm Beach County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

857. Town of Millbury, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46123-DAP: Plaintiff Millbury Town, Massachusetts

Millbury Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Millbury Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Millbury Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Millbury Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Millbury Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Millbury Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Millbury Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 5, 2018. See Town of Millbury, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46123-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Millbury Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Millbury Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Millbury Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Millbury Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Millbury Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Millbury Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Millbury Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See,

e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Millbury Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Millbury Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Millbury Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Millbury Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.12% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Millbury Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Millbury Town filed its original complaint on September 4, 2018. See Town of Millbury, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46123-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Millbury Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Millbury Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Millbury Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Millbury Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Millbury Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Millbury Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Millbury Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Millbury Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Millbury Town filed its original complaint on September 4, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Millbury, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al.,

Case No. 1:18-op-46123-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Millbury Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Millbury Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Millbury Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Millbury Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Millbury Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on September 4, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Millbury Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

858. Letcher County Fiscal Court v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46124-DAP: Plaintiff Letcher County, Kentucky

Letcher County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Letcher County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Letcher County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Letcher County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Letcher County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Letcher County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Letcher County amended its complaint on March 9, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 5, 2018. See Letcher County Fiscal Court v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46124-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Letcher County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Letcher County's deadline to amend was in 2019. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Letcher County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Palm Bay City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Palm Bay City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Palm Bay City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Palm Bay City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Palm Bay City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Palm Bay City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Palm Bay City filed its original complaint on September 19, 2018. See City of Palm Bay v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46132-DAP, ECF No. 2. Despite filing its case years ago, Palm Bay City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). Purdue Pharma L.P. et al.*, Case No. 1:18-op-46132-DAP, ECF No. 2. Even assuming arguendo that Palm Bay City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on September 19, 2022. Palm Bay City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Huron Charter Township fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Huron Charter Township’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Huron Charter Township cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Huron Charter Township failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Huron Charter Township’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Huron Charter Township of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Huron Charter Township refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Huron Charter Township’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Huron Charter Township’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Huron Charter Township’s potential claims against them. Huron Charter Township’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Huron Charter Township’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Huron Charter Township, a municipality in Michigan, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Huron Charter Township's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Huron Charter Township filed its original complaint on September 19, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Charter Township of Canton, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46134-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Huron Charter Township knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Huron Charter Township's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Huron Charter Township's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Huron Charter Township, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

862. Charter Township of Canton, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46134-DAP: Plaintiff Livonia City, Michigan

Livonia City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Livonia City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Livonia City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Livonia City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Livonia City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Livonia City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Livonia City amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 5, 2018. See Charter Township of Canton, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46134-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Livonia City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Livonia City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Livonia City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Livonia City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Livonia City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Livonia City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Livonia City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Livonia City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Livonia City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Livonia City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Livonia City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Livonia City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Livonia City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Livonia City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Livonia City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Livonia City’s potential claims against them. Livonia City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

III.B.4, above. Livonia City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Livonia City, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

863. Charter Township of Canton, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46134-DAP: Plaintiff Northville Charter Township, Michigan

Northville Charter Township's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Northville Charter Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Northville Charter Township also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Northville Charter Township's motion should be denied due to futility, as Northville Charter Township does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Northville Charter Township was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Northville Charter Township amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 5, 2018. *See Charter Township of Canton, et al. v. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Northville Charter Township declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Northville Charter Township's deadline to amend was in 2019. Northville Charter Township waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Northville Charter Township’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

See Gustafson Decl. (0.22% market share for Northville Charter Township). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Northville Charter Township to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Northville Charter Township filed its original complaint on September 19, 2018. See Charter Township of Canton, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46134-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Northville Charter Township never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Northville Charter Township's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Northville Charter Township's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Northville Charter Township's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Northville Charter Township therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Northville Charter Township failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Northville Charter Township's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Northville Charter Township of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Northville Charter Township refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Northville Charter Township’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Van Buren Charter Township fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Van Buren Charter Township's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Van Buren Charter Township, a municipality in Michigan, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Van Buren Charter Township's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Van Buren Charter Township filed its original complaint on September 19, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Charter Township of Canton, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46134-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Van Buren Charter Township knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Van Buren Charter Township's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Van Buren Charter Township's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Van Buren Charter Township, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

866. Charter Township of Canton, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46134-DAP: Plaintiff Wayne City, Michigan

Wayne City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wayne City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wayne City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wayne City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wayne City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wayne City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wayne City amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 5, 2018. See Charter Township of Canton, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46134-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wayne City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wayne City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Wayne City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wayne City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Wayne City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Wayne City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Wayne City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Wayne City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Wayne City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Wayne City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Wayne City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Wayne City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Wayne City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Wayne City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Wayne City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Wayne City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Wayne City's potential claims against them. Wayne City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wayne City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wayne City, a municipality in Michigan, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. 867. Charter Township of Clinton, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46135-DAP: Plaintiff Clinton Charter Township, Michigan

Clinton Charter Township's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Clinton Charter Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Clinton Charter Township also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Clinton Charter Township's motion should be denied due to futility, as Clinton Charter Township does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

868. City of Virginia Beach, et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46137-DAP: Plaintiff Virginia Beach City, Virginia

Virginia Beach City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Virginia Beach City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Virginia Beach City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Virginia Beach City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Virginia Beach City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Virginia Beach City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Virginia Beach City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.30% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Virginia Beach City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Virginia Beach City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Virginia Beach City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Virginia Beach City filed its original complaint on September 10, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Virginia Beach, et al. v. Virginia Beach City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Virginia Beach City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

869. Chelan County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46139-DAP: Plaintiff Chelan County, Washington

Chelan County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chelan County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chelan County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chelan County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Chelan County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chelan County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Chelan County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 12, 2018, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 22, 2020. See Chelan County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46139-DAP, ECF Nos. 22, 25, 27. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Chelan County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Chelan County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Chelan County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Chelan County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Chelan County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.32% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chelan County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Chelan County filed its original complaint on September 7, 2018, but waited until December 7, 2018 to implement a litigation hold. See Chelan County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46139-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 7, 2018). Chelan County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Chelan County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Chelan County, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Chelan County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Chelan County filed its original complaint on September 7, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Chelan County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46139-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Chelan County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Chelan County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Chelan County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Chelan County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Chelan County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on September 7, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chelan County, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

870. Robeson County v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46141-DAP: Plaintiff Robeson County, North Carolina

Robeson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Robeson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Robeson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Robeson County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Robeson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Robeson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Robeson County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 12, 2018. See Robeson County v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46141-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Robeson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Robeson County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Robeson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Robeson County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Robeson County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.11% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Robeson County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Robeson County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Robeson County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Robeson County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Robeson County filed its original complaint on September 4, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Robeson County v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46141-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Robeson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Robeson County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Robeson County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Robeson County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

871. Shinnecock Indian Nation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46142-DAP: Plaintiff Shinnecock Indian Nation, New York

Shinnecock Indian Nation’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Shinnecock Indian Nation failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Shinnecock Indian Nation also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Shinnecock Indian Nation’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Shinnecock Indian Nation does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Shinnecock Indian Nation was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Shinnecock Indian Nation amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Shinnecock Indian Nation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46142-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Shinnecock Indian Nation declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Shinnecock Indian Nation’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Shinnecock Indian Nation waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Shinnecock Indian Nation’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Shinnecock Indian Nation’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Shinnecock Indian Nation filed its original complaint on October 9, 2018. See Shinnecock Indian Nation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46142-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Shinnecock Indian Nation never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Shinnecock Indian Nation's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Shinnecock Indian Nation's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Shinnecock Indian Nation's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Shinnecock Indian Nation therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Shinnecock Indian Nation's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Shinnecock Indian Nation, a native tribe in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Shinnecock Indian Nation's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Shinnecock Indian Nation filed its original complaint on October 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Shinnecock Indian Nation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46142-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Shinnecock Indian Nation knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Shinnecock Indian Nation's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Shinnecock Indian Nation's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Shinnecock Indian Nation, a native tribe in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Shinnecock Indian Nation's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

872. Fiscal Court of Montgomery County v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46144-DAP: Plaintiff Montgomery County, Kentucky

Montgomery County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Montgomery County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Montgomery County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Montgomery County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Montgomery County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Montgomery County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Montgomery County amended its complaint on March 9, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 12, 2018. See Fiscal Court of Montgomery County v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46144-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Montgomery County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Montgomery County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Montgomery County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Montgomery County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Montgomery County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Montgomery County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Montgomery County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Montgomery County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Montgomery County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Montgomery County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Montgomery County filed its original complaint on September 21, 2018. See Fiscal Court of Montgomery County v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46144-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Montgomery County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Montgomery County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Montgomery County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. 873. Fiscal Court of Powell County v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46145-DAP: Plaintiff Powell County, Kentucky

Powell County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Powell County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Powell County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Powell County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Powell County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Powell County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Powell County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Powell County filed its original complaint on September 19, 2018, but waited until September 25, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—six years later. See Fiscal Court of Powell County v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46145-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 25, 2024). Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Powell County, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

874. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46146-DAP: Plaintiff Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, Minnesota

Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's motion should be denied due to futility, as Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on July 31, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on October 12, 2018. See Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46146-DAP, ECF No. 17. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa elected not to do so. Instead, Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on July 31, 2018. See Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46146-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Minnesota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Minnesota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, a native tribe in Minnesota, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on July 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46146-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on July 31, 2022. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, a native tribe in Minnesota, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

875. People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46147-DAP: Plaintiff Schuyler County, Illinois

Schuyler County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Schuyler County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Schuyler County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Schuyler County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Schuyler County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Schuyler County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Schuyler County amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46147-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Schuyler County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Schuyler County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Schuyler County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Schuyler County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Schuyler County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Schuyler County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Schuyler County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006

(affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Schuyler County filed its original complaint on October 12, 2018. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46147-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Schuyler County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Schuyler County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Schuyler County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Schuyler County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Schuyler County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Schuyler County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Schuyler County, a municipality in Illinois, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Schuyler County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Schuyler County filed its original complaint on October 12, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46147-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Schuyler County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Schuyler County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Schuyler County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Schuyler County, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

876. People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46148-DAP: Plaintiff Johnson County, Illinois

Johnson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Johnson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Johnson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Johnson County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Johnson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Johnson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Johnson County amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See *People of the State of Illinois et al. v. See Section II.A.1, above. Johnson County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Johnson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Johnson County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

(0.07% market share for Johnson County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Johnson County to add dispensing claims against

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Johnson County, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

877. Town of Lunenburg, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46156-DAP: Plaintiff Lunenburg Town, Massachusetts

Lunenburg Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lunenburg Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lunenburg Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lunenburg Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lunenburg Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lunenburg Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lunenburg Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 18, 2018. See Town of Lunenburg, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46156-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lunenburg Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lunenburg Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Lunenburg Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lunenburg Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline);

Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Lunenburg Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Lunenburg Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Lunenburg Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

units shipped to Lunenburg Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.01% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lunenburg Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lunenburg Town filed its original complaint on September 25, 2018. See Town of Lunenburg, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46156-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lunenburg Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lunenburg Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lunenburg Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Lunenburg Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Lunenburg Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Lunenburg Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on September 25, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lunenburg Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

878. Town of Wilmington, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46158-DAP: Plaintiff Wilmington Town, Massachusetts

Wilmington Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wilmington Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wilmington Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wilmington Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wilmington Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wilmington Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wilmington Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 23, 2018. *See Town of Wilmington, Massachusetts v. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wilmington Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wilmington Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Wilmington Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wilmington Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Wilmington Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Wilmington Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.12% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Wilmington Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wilmington Town filed its original complaint on September 26, 2018. See Town of Wilmington, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46158-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wilmington Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Wilmington Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Wilmington Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Wilmington Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on September 26, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wilmington Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

879. Town of North Andover, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46159-DAP: Plaintiff North Andover Town, Massachusetts

North Andover Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. North Andover Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. North Andover Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, North Andover Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as North Andover Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. North Andover Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, North Andover Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 23, 2018. See Town of North Andover, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46159-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, North Andover Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. North Andover Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. North Andover Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. North Andover Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. North Andover Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. North Andover Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. North Andover Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to North Andover Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, North Andover Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to North Andover Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.09% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for North Andover Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. North Andover Town filed its original complaint on September 26, 2018. See Town of North Andover, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46159-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, North Andover Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455.

Litigating North Andover Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of North Andover Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by North Andover Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and North Andover Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But North Andover Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. North Andover Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for North Andover Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. North Andover Town filed its original complaint on September 26, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of North Andover, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46159-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that North Andover Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. North Andover Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. North Andover Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. North Andover Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because North Andover Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on September 26, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." Plaintiff Lacks Standing. North Andover Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

880. Town of Upton, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46160-DAP: Plaintiff Upton Town, Massachusetts

Upton Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Upton Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Upton Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Upton Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Upton Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Upton Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Thus, Upton Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Upton Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Upton Town filed its original complaint on September 26, 2018. *See Town of Upton, Massachusetts v. 881. City of Laurel, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46161-DAP: Plaintiff Laurel City, Mississippi

Laurel City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Laurel City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Laurel City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Laurel City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Laurel City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Laurel City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Laurel City amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 23, 2018. See City of Laurel, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46161-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Laurel City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Laurel City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Laurel City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Laurel City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Laurel City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Laurel City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Laurel City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Laurel City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Laurel City filed its original complaint on September 28, 2018, but waited until December 20, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—more than one year and two months later. See City of Laurel, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46161-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 20, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Laurel City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Laurel City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Laurel City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Laurel City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Laurel City filed its original complaint on September 28, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Laurel, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46161-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Laurel City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on September 28, 2022. Laurel City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Laurel City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

882. Town of Stoneham, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46164-DAP: Plaintiff Stoneham Town, Massachusetts

Stoneham Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Stoneham Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Stoneham Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Stoneham Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Stoneham Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Stoneham Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Stoneham Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Stoneham Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Stoneham Town filed its original complaint on September 26, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Stoneham, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46164-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Stoneham Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Stoneham Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Stoneham Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Stoneham Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Stoneham Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on September 26, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Stoneham Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

883. Tazewell County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46167-DAP: Plaintiff Tazewell County, Virginia

Tazewell County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Tazewell County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Tazewell County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Tazewell County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Tazewell County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Tazewell County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Tazewell County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 23, 2018. See Tazewell County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46167-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Tazewell County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Tazewell County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Tazewell County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Tazewell County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Tazewell County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Tazewell County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Tazewell County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Decl., Exhibit C (0.25% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Tazewell County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Tazewell County filed its original complaint on August 27, 2018. See Tazewell County, Virginia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46167-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Tazewell County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Tazewell County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Tazewell County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Tazewell County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Tazewell County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Tazewell County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Tazewell County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Tazewell County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Tazewell County filed its original complaint on August 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Tazewell County, Virginia v. It is therefore indisputable that Tazewell County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Tazewell County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Tazewell County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Tazewell County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

884. Livingston County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46168-DAP: Plaintiff Livingston County, Missouri

Livingston County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Livingston County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Livingston County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Livingston County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Livingston County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Livingston County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Livingston County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 23, 2018. See Livingston County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46168-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Livingston County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Livingston County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Livingston County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Livingston County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Livingston County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.28% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Livingston County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Livingston County filed its original complaint on October 3, 2018. See Livingston County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46168-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Livingston County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Livingston County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Livingston County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Livingston County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Livingston County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Livingston County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Livingston County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Livingston County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Livingston County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Livingston County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Livingston County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Livingston County's potential claims against them. Livingston County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Livingston County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Livingston County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Livingston County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Livingston County filed its original complaint on October 3, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Livingston County, Missouri v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46168-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Livingston County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Livingston County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Livingston County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Livingston County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

885. City of Syracuse, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46169-DAP: Plaintiff Syracuse City, New York

Syracuse City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Syracuse City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Syracuse City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Syracuse City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Syracuse City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Syracuse City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Syracuse City amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 24, 2018. See City of Syracuse, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46169-DAP, ECF No. 42. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Syracuse City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Syracuse City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Syracuse City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Syracuse City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Syracuse City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Syracuse City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Syracuse City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Syracuse City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Syracuse City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Syracuse City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Syracuse City began receiving those services on January 9, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Syracuse City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Syracuse City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Syracuse City's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Syracuse City filed its original complaint on October 1, 2018. See City of Syracuse, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46169-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Syracuse City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Syracuse City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Syracuse City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Syracuse City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Syracuse City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Syracuse City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Syracuse City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Syracuse City filed its original complaint on October 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Syracuse, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46169-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Syracuse City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Syracuse City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Syracuse City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Syracuse City, a city in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Syracuse City’s request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

886. Lee County Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46171-DAP: Plaintiff Lee County, Georgia

Lee County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lee County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lee County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lee County amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 24, 2018. See Lee County Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46171-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lee County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lee County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lee County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lee County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Lee County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Lee County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Lee County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

units shipped to Lee County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.32% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lee County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lee County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lee County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lee County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lee County filed its original complaint on September 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Lee County Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46171-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lee County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, six years before seeking leave to amend. Lee County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lee County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lee County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

887. City of Iuka, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46172-DAP: Plaintiff Iuka City, Mississippi

Iuka City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Iuka City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Iuka City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Iuka City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Iuka City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Iuka City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Iuka City amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 24, 2018. See City of Iuka, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46172-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Iuka City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Iuka City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Iuka City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Iuka City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Iuka City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Iuka City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Iuka City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Iuka City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.005% market share for Iuka City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Iuka City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.19% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Iuka City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Iuka City filed its original complaint on September 27, 2018. See City of Iuka, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46172-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Iuka City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Iuka City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Iuka City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Iuka City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Iuka City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Iuka City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Iuka City, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Iuka City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Iuka City filed its original complaint on September 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Iuka, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46172-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Iuka City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on September 27, 2022. Iuka City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Iuka City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Iuka City, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

888. Monroe County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46173-DAP: Plaintiff Monroe County, Mississip

Monroe County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Monroe County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Monroe County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Monroe County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Monroe County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Monroe County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Monroe County amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 25, 2018. See Monroe County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46173-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Monroe County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Monroe County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Monroe County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Monroe County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Monroe County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Monroe County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Monroe County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Monroe County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.12% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Monroe County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Monroe County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Monroe County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Monroe County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Monroe County filed its original complaint on September 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Monroe County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46173-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Monroe County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on September 27, 2022. Monroe County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Monroe County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Monroe County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

889. Currituck County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46174-DAP: Plaintiff Currituck County, North Carolina

Currituck County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Currituck County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Currituck County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Currituck County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Currituck County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Currituck County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Currituck County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 25, 2018. See Currituck County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46174-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Currituck County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Currituck County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Currituck County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Currituck County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Currituck County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Currituck County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Currituck County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Currituck County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.18% market share for Currituck County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Currituck County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Currituck County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Currituck County filed its original complaint on September 27, 2018, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—more than one year and two months later. See Currituck County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46174-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Currituck County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Currituck County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Currituck County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al.*, Case No. 1:18-op-46174-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Currituck County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Currituck County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Currituck County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Currituck County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

890. Chowan County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46175-DAP: Plaintiff Chowan County, North Carolina

Chowan County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chowan County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chowan County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chowan County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Chowan County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chowan County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Chowan County filed its original complaint on September 27, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on October 25, 2018. See Chowan County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46175-DAP, ECF No. 6. Chowan County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Chowan County elected not to do so. Instead, Chowan County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Chowan County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Chowan County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Chowan County filed its original complaint on September 27, 2018, but waited until December 17, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—more than one year and two months later. *See Chowan County v. for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Chowan County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Chowan County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chowan County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

891. Board of Commissioners for Lucas County, Ohio et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46177-DAP: Plaintiff Lucas County, Ohio

Lucas County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lucas County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lucas County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lucas County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lucas County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lucas County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lucas County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Board of Commissioners for Lucas County, Ohio et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46177-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lucas County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lucas County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lucas County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lucas County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lucas County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lucas County, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Lucas County is a plaintiff in Ohio. Lucas County's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lucas County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lucas County filed its original complaint on October 23, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of Commissioners for Lucas County, Ohio et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46177-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lucas County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Lucas County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lucas County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lucas County, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

892. County of Ingham, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46178-DAP: Plaintiff Ingham County, Michigan

Ingham County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ingham County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Ingham County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ingham County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Ingham County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ingham County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ingham County amended its complaint on March 16, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See County of Ingham, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46178-DAP, ECF No. 24. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ingham County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Ingham County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Ingham County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ingham County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Ingham County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Ingham County, a municipality in Michigan, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Ingham County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ingham County, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

893. Ashe County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46185-DAP: Plaintiff Ashe County, North Carolina

Ashe County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ashe County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ashe County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ashe County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Ashe County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ashe County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ashe County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 26, 2018. See Ashe County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46185-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ashe County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Ashe County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Ashe County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ashe County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Ashe County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Ashe County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Ashe County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Ashe County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Ashe County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ashe County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.31% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ashe County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Ashe County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Ashe County filed its original complaint on October 12, 2018, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—one year and two months later. See Ashe County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46185-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Ashe County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Ashe County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Ashe County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Ashe County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Ashe County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Ashe County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Ashe County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Ashe County filed its original complaint on October 12, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Ashe County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46185-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Ashe County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Ashe County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Ashe County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ashe County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

894. Cole County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46189-DAP: Plaintiff Cole County, Missouri

Cole County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cole County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cole County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cole County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Cole County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cole County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cole County amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Cole County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46189-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cole County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Cole County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Cole County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cole County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

(0.10% market share for Cole County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cole County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Cole County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

895. Gasconade County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46190-DAP: Plaintiff Gasconade County, Missouri

Gasconade County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Gasconade County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Gasconade County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Gasconade County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Gasconade County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

(0.06% market share for Osage County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Osage County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Osage County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Osage County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Osage County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Osage County filed its original complaint on October 26, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Osage County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46191-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Osage County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Osage County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Osage County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Osage County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

897. Pulaski County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46192-DAP: Plaintiff Pulaski County, Missouri

Pulaski County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pulaski County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pulaski County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pulaski County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Pulaski County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pulaski County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pulaski County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Pulaski County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46192-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pulaski County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pulaski County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Pulaski County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pulaski County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Pulaski County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Pulaski County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Pulaski County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Pulaski County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Pulaski County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pulaski County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Pulaski County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pulaski County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Pulaski County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Pulaski County filed its original complaint on October 26, 2018, but waited until February 1, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—one year and three months later. See Pulaski County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46192-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: February 1, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Pulaski County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Pulaski County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Pulaski County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Pulaski County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pulaski County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pulaski County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Pulaski County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Pulaski County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pulaski County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

898. Reynolds County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46193-DAP: Plaintiff Reynolds County, Missouri

Reynolds County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Reynolds County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Reynolds County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Reynolds County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Reynolds County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Reynolds County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Reynolds County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Reynolds County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Reynolds County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

899. Maries County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46194-DAP: Plaintiff Maries County, Missouri

Maries County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Maries County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Maries County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Maries County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Maries County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Maries County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Maries County filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on October 26, 2018. See Maries County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46194-DAP, ECF No. 1. Maries County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Maries County elected not to do so. Maries County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Maries County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Maries County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. low to support a finding of good cause for Maries County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Maries County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Maries County filed its original complaint on October 26, 2018, but waited until August 26, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five and a half years later. *See Maries County, Missouri v. 900. Phelps County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46195-DAP: Plaintiff Phelps County, Missouri

Phelps County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Phelps County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Phelps County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Phelps County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Phelps County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Phelps County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Phelps County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Phelps County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46195-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Phelps County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Phelps County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Phelps County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Phelps County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Phelps County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Phelps County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Phelps County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Phelps County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.25% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Phelps County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Phelps County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Phelps County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Phelps County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Phelps County filed its original complaint on October 26, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Phelps County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46195-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Phelps County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Phelps County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Phelps County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Phelps County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

901. Warren County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46196-DAP: Plaintiff Warren County, Missouri

Warren County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Warren County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Warren County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Warren County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Warren County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Warren County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Warren County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Warren County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46196-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Warren County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Warren County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Warren County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Warren County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Warren County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey &

Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Warren County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Warren County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Warren County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Warren County filed its original complaint on October 29, 2018, but waited until September 27, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—nearly six years later. See Warren County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46196-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 27, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Warren County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Warren County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Warren County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Warren County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Warren County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Warren County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Warren County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Warren County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Warren County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Warren County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Warren County's potential claims against them. Warren County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Warren County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Warren County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Warren County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Warren County filed its original complaint on October 29, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Warren County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46196-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Warren County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Warren County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Warren County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Warren County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

902. Montgomery County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46197-DAP: Plaintiff Montgomery County, Missouri

Montgomery County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Montgomery County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Montgomery County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Montgomery County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Montgomery County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Montgomery County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Montgomery County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Montgomery County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46197-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Montgomery County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Montgomery County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Montgomery County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Montgomery County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Montgomery County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.21% market share for Montgomery County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Montgomery County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Montgomery County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

903. Ozark County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46198-DAP: Plaintiff Ozark County, Missouri

Ozark County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ozark County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ozark County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ozark County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Ozark County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ozark County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ozark County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Ozark County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46198-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ozark County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Ozark County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Ozark County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ozark County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ozark County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Ozark County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Ozark County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Ozark County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Ozark County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Ozark County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Ozark County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Ozark County’s potential claims against them. Ozark County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

904. Muskegon County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46199-DAP: Plaintiff Muskegon County, Michigan

Muskegon County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Muskegon County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Muskegon County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Muskegon County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Muskegon County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Muskegon County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above.

Moreover, Muskegon County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 30, 2018. See Muskegon County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46199-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Muskegon County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Muskegon County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Muskegon County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Muskegon County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Muskegon County filed its original complaint on October 9, 2018. See Muskegon County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46199-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Muskegon County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Muskegon County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Muskegon County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Muskegon County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

It is therefore indisputable that Muskegon County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Muskegon County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Muskegon County, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

905. Town of Middleborough v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46200-DAP: Plaintiff Middleborough Town, Massachusetts

Middleborough Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Middleborough Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Middleborough Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Middleborough Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Middleborough Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Middleborough Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Middleborough Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on October 30, 2018. See Town of Middleborough v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46200-DAP, ECF No. 13 Unlike many other plaintiffs, Middleborough Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Middleborough Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Middleborough Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Middleborough Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline);

Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Middleborough Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Middleborough Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Middleborough Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Middleborough Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Middleborough Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Middleborough Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Middleborough Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Middleborough Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Middleborough Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Middleborough Town filed its original complaint on October 12, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Middleborough v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46200-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Middleborough Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost six years before seeking leave to amend. Middleborough Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Middleborough Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Middleborough Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Middleborough Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on October 12, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Middleborough Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

906. City of Ashland, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46203-DAP: Plaintiff Ashland City, Ohio

Ashland City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ashland City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ashland City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ashland City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Ashland City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ashland City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ashland City amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Ashland, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46203-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ashland City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Ashland City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Ashland City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ashland City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Ashland City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Ashland City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Ashland City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Ashland City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Ashland City filed its original complaint on October 31, 2018, but waited until December 16, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—over thirteen months later. See City of Ashland, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46203-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 16, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Ashland City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Ashland City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Ashland City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Ashland City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Ashland City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Ashland City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Ashland City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Ashland City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Ashland City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Ashland City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Ashland City’s potential claims against them. Ashland City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Ashland City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Ashland City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Ashland City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Ashland City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Ashland City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Ashland City filed its original complaint on October 31, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Ashland, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46203-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Ashland City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Ashland City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Ashland City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ashland City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

907. Alexander County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46205-DAP: Plaintiff Alexander County, North Carolina

Alexander County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Alexander County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Alexander County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Alexander County’s motion should be denied due to futility, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Alexander County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Alexander County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on November 1, 2018. See Alexander County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46205-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Alexander County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Alexander County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Alexander County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Alexander County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459

(affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Alexander County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Alexander County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Alexander County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Alexander County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Alexander County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Alexander County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.42% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Alexander County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Alexander County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Alexander County filed its original complaint on October 15, 2018, but waited until December 18, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—over fourteen months later. See Alexander County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46205-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 18, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Alexander County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

908. County Commissioners of Dona Ana County, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:18-op-46206-DAP: Plaintiff Dona Ana County, New Mexico

Dona Ana County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dona Ana County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dona Ana County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dona Ana County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Dona Ana County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. 909. Davie County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46207-DAP: Plaintiff Davie County, North Carolina

Davie County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Davie County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Davie County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Davie County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Davie County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al.*, Case No. 1:18-op-46207-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Davie County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Davie County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim") (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555); see Section III.B.4, above. Davie County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Davie County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

910. Plains Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46215-DAP: Plaintiff Plains Township, Pennsylvania

Plains Township’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Plains Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Plains Township also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Plains Township’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Plains Township does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Plains Township was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Plains Township amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on November 8, 2018. See Plains Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46215-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Plains Township declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Plains Township’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Plains Township waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Plains Township’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Plains Township cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Plains Township, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Plains Township fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Plains Township violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Plains Township filed its original complaint on October 18, 2018, but waited until September 20, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—nearly six years later. See Plains Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46215-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 20, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Plains Township's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Plains Township's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Plains Township's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Plains Township therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Plains Township failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Plains Township's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period.

The PBMs notified Plains Township of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Plains Township refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Plains Township’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Plains Township’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Plains Township’s potential claims against them. Plains Township’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Plains Township’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Plains Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Plains Township’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Plains Township filed its original complaint on October 18, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Plains Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46215-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Plains Township knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Plains Township's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Plains Township's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Plains Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

911. Franklin County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46216-DAP: Plaintiff Franklin County, North Carolina

Franklin County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Franklin County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Franklin County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Franklin County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Franklin County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al.*, Case No. 1:18-op-46216-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Franklin County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Franklin County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Franklin County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Franklin County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Franklin County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.09% market share for Franklin County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Franklin County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Franklin County filed its original complaint on October 22, 2018. See Franklin County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46216-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Franklin County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Franklin County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Franklin County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

912. Nye County, Nevada v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46238-DAP: Plaintiff Nye County, Nevada

Nye County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Nye County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Nye County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Nye County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Nye County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

913. Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46239-DAP: Plaintiff Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians, Michigan

Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians' untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians' motion should be denied due to futility, as Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians amended its complaint on August 9, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46239-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al.*, Case No. 1:18-op-46239-DAP, ECF No. 1. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians' delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

914. Leon County, Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46242-DAP: Plaintiff Leon County, Florida

Leon County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Leon County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Leon County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Leon County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Leon County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Leon County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Leon County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Leon County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Leon County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Leon County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Leon County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Leon County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Leon County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

low to support a finding of good cause for Leon County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Leon County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Leon County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Leon County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Leon County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Leon County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Leon County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Leon County's potential claims against them. Leon County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Leon County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Leon County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Leon County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Leon County filed its original complaint on October 25, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Leon County, Florida v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46242-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Leon County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Leon County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Leon County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Leon County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Leon County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on October 25, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Leon County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

915. Ripley County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46262-DAP: Plaintiff Ripley County, Missouri

Ripley County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ripley County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ripley County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ripley County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Ripley County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ripley County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ripley County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Ripley County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46262-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ripley County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Ripley County’s deadline to amend was in 2019.

Ripley County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ripley County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ripley County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ripley County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

916. Lewis County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46263-DAP: Plaintiff Lewis County, Missouri

Lewis County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lewis County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lewis County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lewis County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lewis County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lewis County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lewis County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Lewis County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46263-DAP, ECF No. 2.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lewis County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lewis County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lewis County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lewis County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Lewis County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.11% market share for Lewis County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lewis County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Lewis County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.37% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lewis County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Lewis County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Lewis County filed its original complaint on November 20, 2018, but waited until September 26, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—nearly six years later. See Lewis County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46263-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 26, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lewis County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lewis County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lewis County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lewis County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lewis County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. 917. Shelby County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46264-DAP: Plaintiff Shelby County, Missouri

Shelby County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Shelby County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Shelby County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Shelby County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Shelby County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. 918. Audrain County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46265-DAP: Plaintiff Audrain County, Missouri

Audrain County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Audrain County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Audrain County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Audrain County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Audrain County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Audrain County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Audrain County amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Audrain County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46265-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Audrain County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Audrain County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Audrain County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Audrain County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Audrain County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Audrain County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Audrain County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Audrain County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Audrain County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Audrain County to add dispensing claims against

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Audrain County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.35% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Audrain County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Audrain County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Audrain County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Audrain County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Audrain County filed its amended complaint on March 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Audrain County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46265-DAP, ECF No. 3. It is therefore indisputable that Audrain County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend.

Audrain County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Audrain County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Audrain County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

919. Tanana Chiefs Conference et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46268-DAP: Plaintiff Southcentral Foundation, Alaska

Southcentral Foundation's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Southcentral Foundation failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Southcentral Foundation also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Southcentral Foundation's motion should be denied due to futility, as Southcentral Foundation does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Southcentral Foundation was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Southcentral Foundation first amended its complaint on November 15, 2018. See Tanana Chiefs Conference et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46268-DAP, ECF No. 6. Southcentral Foundation amended its complaint again on August 12, 2019. See Tanana

Chiefs Conference et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46268-DAP, ECF No. 43. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Southcentral Foundation declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Southcentral Foundation’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Southcentral Foundation waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Southcentral Foundation’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Southcentral Foundation’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.02% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Southcentral Foundation to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Southcentral Foundation violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Southcentral Foundation filed its original complaint on October 30, 2018, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five and a half years later. See Tanana Chiefs Conference et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46268-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Southcentral Foundation’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Southcentral Foundation’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Southcentral Foundation’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Southcentral Foundation therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Lack of Fair Notice. Southcentral Foundation’s failure to provide a proposed amended complaint is especially problematic because Southcentral Foundation is one of several “nonprofit regional tribal health organization that provides health care programs and services” to Alaska Natives. Southcentral Found. v. Alaska Native Tribal Health Consortium, 983 F.3d 411, 413–14 (9th Cir. 2020); see also Tanana Chiefs Conference et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46268-DAP (N.D. Ohio Nov. 15, 2018), ECF No. 6 at ¶¶ 40–41. Southcentral Foundation operates under the tribal authority of Cook Inlet Region, Inc., and occupies several unique roles in the Alaska Native healthcare system using funds from the federal government and “other sources.” Tanana Chiefs Conference et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46268-DAP, ECF No. 6 at ¶¶ 40–41. Because of this unique role, the PBMs have no means of determining whether Southcentral Foundation is seeking to recoup federal, state, or private funds without a proposed amended complaint. Southcentral Foundation’s motion for leave to amend should therefore be denied because it fails to provide the PBMs with fair notice of Southcentral Foundation’s claims. Beydown, 871 F.3d at 469 (noting that a court cannot determine whether amendment is proper without knowing the “substance of the proposed amendment”).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alaska law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Southcentral Foundation's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alaska law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Southcentral Foundation, a native tribe in Alaska, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Southcentral Foundation's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Southcentral Foundation filed its original complaint on October 30, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Tanana Chiefs Conference et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46268-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Southcentral Foundation knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Southcentral Foundation's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Southcentral Foundation's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Southcentral Foundation, a native tribe in Alaska, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

920. Carroll County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46269-DAP: Plaintiff Carroll County, Georgia

Carroll County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Carroll County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Carroll County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Carroll County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Carroll County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Carroll County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Carroll County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on November 27, 2018. See Carroll County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46269-DAP, ECF No. 17. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Carroll County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Carroll County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Carroll County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Carroll County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Carroll County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Carroll County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Carroll County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Carroll County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.32% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Carroll County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Carroll County filed its original complaint on November 2, 2018. See Carroll County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46269-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Carroll County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Carroll County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Carroll County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Carroll County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Carroll County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Carroll County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Carroll County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Carroll County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

921. Carbon County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46270-DAP: Plaintiff Carbon County, Utah

Carbon County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Carbon County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Carbon County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Carbon County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Carbon County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Carbon County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Carbon County amended its complaint on March 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on November 28, 2018. See Carbon County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46270-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Carbon County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Carbon County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Carbon County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Carbon County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Carbon County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Carbon County filed its original complaint on November 1, 2018, but waited until September 18, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five and a half years later. See Carbon County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46270-DAP, ECF No. 2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 18, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Carbon County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Carbon County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Carbon County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Carbon County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Carbon County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Carbon County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Carbon County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Carbon County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Carbon County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Carbon County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Carbon County's potential claims against them. Carbon County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Utah law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Carbon County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Utah law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Carbon County, a municipality in Utah, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Carbon County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Carbon County filed its original complaint on November 1, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Carbon County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46270-DAP, ECF No. 2. It is therefore indisputable that Carbon County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Carbon County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Carbon County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Carbon County, a municipality in Utah, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

922. Hillsborough County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46281-DAP: Plaintiff Hillsborough County, Florida

Hillsborough County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hillsborough County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hillsborough County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hillsborough County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Hillsborough County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hillsborough County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hillsborough County first amended its complaint on October 18, 2018. See Hillsborough County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46281-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hillsborough County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Hillsborough County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Hillsborough County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hillsborough County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Hillsborough County filed its original complaint on August 14, 2018. See Hillsborough County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46281-DAP, ECF No. 1-4. Despite filing its case years ago, Hillsborough County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Hillsborough County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Hillsborough County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024.

The PBMs are prejudiced by Hillsborough County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Hillsborough County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hillsborough County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Hillsborough County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hillsborough County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hillsborough County filed its original complaint on August 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Hillsborough County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46281-DAP, ECF No. 1-4. Even assuming arguendo that Hillsborough County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on August 14, 2022. Hillsborough County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Hillsborough County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Hillsborough County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Hillsborough County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 14, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hillsborough County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

923. City of Tampa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46282-DAP: Plaintiff Tampa City, Florida

Tampa City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Tampa City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Tampa City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Tampa City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Tampa City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Tampa City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Tampa City first amended its complaint on October 16, 2018. See City of Tampa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46282-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Tampa City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Tampa City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Tampa City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Tampa City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Tampa City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.24% market share for Tampa City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Tampa City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.30% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Tampa City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Tampa City filed its original complaint on October 2, 2018. See City of Tampa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46282-DAP, ECF No. 1-5. Despite filing its case years ago, Tampa City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Tampa City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Tampa City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Tampa City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Tampa City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Tampa City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Tampa City, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Tampa City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Tampa City filed its original complaint on October 2, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Tampa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46282-DAP, ECF No. 1-5. Even assuming arguendo that Tampa City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on October 2, 2022. Tampa City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Tampa City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Tampa City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Tampa City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on October 2, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

924. Union County, Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46284-DAP: Plaintiff Union County, Georgia

Union County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Union County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Union County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Union County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Union County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Union County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Union County amended its complaint on March 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on November 30, 2018. See Union County, Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46284-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Union County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Union County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Union County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Union County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Union County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Union County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Union County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Union County filed its original complaint on October 25, 2018. See Union County, Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46284-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Union County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). It is therefore indisputable that Union County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Union County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. 925. City of Fall River v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46285-DAP: Plaintiff Fall River City, Massachusetts

Fall River City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fall River City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fall River City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fall River City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Fall River City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Fall River City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Fall River City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Fall River City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Fall River City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Fall River City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Fall River City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Fall River City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Fall River City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Fall River City filed its original complaint on August 20, 2018, but waited until July 9, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five and a half years later. See City of Fall River v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46285-DAP, ECF No. 2-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 9, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Fall River City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Fall River City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. It is therefore indisputable that Fall River City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Fall River

City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. 926. City of Overland Park, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46287-DAP: Plaintiff Overland Park City, Kansas

Overland Park City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Overland Park City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Overland Park City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Overland Park City's motion should be denied due to

927. People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46294-DAP: Plaintiff Calhoun County, Illinois

Calhoun County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Calhoun County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Calhoun County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Calhoun County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Calhoun County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Calhoun County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Calhoun County amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46294-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Calhoun County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Calhoun County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Calhoun County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Calhoun County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Calhoun County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Calhoun County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Calhoun County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs

in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Calhoun County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Calhoun County filed its original complaint on December 3, 2018, but waited until September 25, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five and a half years later. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46294-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 25, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Calhoun County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Calhoun County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Calhoun County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Calhoun County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Calhoun County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Calhoun County, a municipality in Illinois, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Calhoun County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Calhoun County filed its original complaint on December 3, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46294-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Calhoun County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Calhoun County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Calhoun County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Calhoun County, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

928. Rockdale County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46296-DAP: Plaintiff Rockdale County, Georgia

Rockdale County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rockdale County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rockdale County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rockdale County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Rockdale County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Rockdale County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rockdale County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Rockdale County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46296-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Rockdale County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Rockdale County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Rockdale County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Rockdale County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Rockdale County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Rockdale County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Rockdale County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Rockdale County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.17% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rockdale County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Rockdale County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Rockdale County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Rockdale County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Rockdale County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Rockdale County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Rockdale County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Rockdale County's potential claims against them. Rockdale County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Rockdale County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Rockdale County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Filed a Separate PBM Case. Rockdale County previously filed an opioid case outside the MDL against the PBMs on March 21, 2023. See City of Atlanta, GA et al. v. Mylan Pharmaceuticals, Inc., et al., Case No. 1:23-cv-01193-JPB, ECF No. 1 (N.D. Ga.). Rockdale County also voluntarily dismissed its claims against the PBMs in that case. Id., ECF Nos. 147, 148, 150, 151. By suing the PBMs outside the MDL in 2023, Rockdale County shows that it possessed facts to assert claims against the PBMs before it moved to amend in the MDL, precluding a showing of good cause here. See Profitt, 2024 WL 3622448, at *4 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff previously possessed documents showing underlying factual basis for proposed claim).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Rockdale County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Rockdale County filed its original complaint on December 4, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Rockdale County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46296-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Rockdale County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Rockdale County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Rockdale County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Rockdale County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

929. Clayton County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46298-DAP: Plaintiff Clayton County, Georgia

Clayton County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Clayton County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Clayton County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Clayton County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Clayton County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Clayton County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Clayton County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Clayton County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Clayton County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Clayton County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

low to support a finding of good cause for Clayton County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Clayton County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Clayton County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. 930. Coos County, Oregon v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46300-DAP: Plaintiff Coos County, Oregon

Coos County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Coos County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Coos County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Coos County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Coos County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Coos County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Oregon law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Coos County, a municipality in Oregon, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

931. Lewis County, Washington, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46301-DAP: Plaintiff Lewis County, Washington

Lewis County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lewis County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lewis County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lewis County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lewis County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lewis County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lewis County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. *See Lewis County, Washington, et al. v. Lewis County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

low to support a finding of good cause for Lewis County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Lewis County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Lewis County filed its original complaint on December 9, 2018, but waited until February 25, 2021 to implement a litigation hold—more than two years later. See Lewis County, Washington, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46301-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: February 25, 2021). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lewis County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lewis County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lewis County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lewis County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lewis County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lewis County, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lewis County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lewis County filed its original complaint on December 9, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Lewis County, Washington, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46301-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lewis County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Lewis County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lewis County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lewis County, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

932. Camden County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46306-DAP: Plaintiff Camden County, New Jersey

Camden County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Camden County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Camden County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Camden County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Camden County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Camden County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Camden County first amended its complaint on April 17, 2018. See Camden County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46306-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Camden County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Camden County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Camden County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Camden County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Camden County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.28% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Camden County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Camden County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Camden County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Camden County began receiving those services on February 24, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Camden County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Camden County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above.

Camden County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Camden County filed its original complaint on February 21, 2018. See Camden County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46306-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Camden County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Camden County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Camden County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Camden County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Camden County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Camden County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Camden County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Camden County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Camden County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Camden County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF

No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Camden County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Camden County's potential claims against them. Camden County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Jersey law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Camden County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Jersey law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Camden County, a municipality in New Jersey, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Camden County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Camden County filed its original complaint on February 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a New Jersey RICO claim against other defendants. See Camden County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46306-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. It is therefore indisputable that Camden County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. See State v. Ball, 632 A.2d 1222, 1235 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1993) (explaining that New Jersey’s “Little RICO” statute is analogous to the federal RICO statute). Camden County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Camden County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Camden County, a municipality in New Jersey, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

933. City of Hickory v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46307-DAP: Plaintiff Hickory City, North Carolina

Hickory City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hickory City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hickory City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hickory City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Hickory City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hickory City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hickory City amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on December 10, 2018,. See City of Hickory v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46307-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hickory City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Hickory City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Hickory City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hickory City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Hickory City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Hickory City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Hickory City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Hickory City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Hickory City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Hickory City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Hickory City filed its original complaint on November 19, 2018. See City of Hickory v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46307-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Hickory City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Hickory City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Hickory City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Hickory City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Hickory City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hickory City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Hickory City, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hickory City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hickory City filed its original complaint on November 19, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Hickory v. It is therefore indisputable that Hickory City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Hickory City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Hickory City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hickory City, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

934. City of Portland v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46313-DAP: Plaintiff Portland City, Maine

Portland City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Portland City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Portland City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Portland City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Portland City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Portland City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Portland City first amended its complaint on June 18, 2018. See City of Portland v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46313-DAP, ECF No. 6-32. Portland City amended its complaint again on March 18, 2019. See City of Portland v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46313-DAP, ECF No. 100. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Portland City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Portland City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Portland City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Portland City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Portland City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Portland City—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Portland City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Portland City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.18% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Portland City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Portland City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Portland City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Portland City began receiving those services on July 27, 2009. See id. Inasmuch as Portland City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Portland City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Portland City's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Portland City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Portland City, a municipality in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Portland City is a plaintiff in Maine. Portland City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Portland City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Portland City filed its second amended complaint on March 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Portland v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46313-DAP, ECF No. 100. It is therefore indisputable that Portland City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Portland City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Portland City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Portland City, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

935. City of Bangor v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46314-DAP: Plaintiff Bangor City, Maine

Bangor City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bangor City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bangor City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bangor City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Bangor City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bangor City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bangor City first amended its complaint on July 26, 2018. See City of Bangor v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46314-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Bangor City amended its complaint again on March 15, 2019. See City of Bangor v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46314-DAP, ECF No. 115. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bangor City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Bangor City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Bangor City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bangor City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Bangor City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Bangor City—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Bangor City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Bangor City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.0009% market share for Bangor City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bangor City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.08% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bangor City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bangor City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bangor City, a municipality in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Bangor City is a plaintiff in Maine. Bangor City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bangor City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bangor City filed its second amended complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Bangor v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46314-DAP, ECF No. 115. It is therefore indisputable that Bangor City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Bangor City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13

(holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bangor City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bangor City, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

936. City of Lewiston v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46315-DAP: Plaintiff Lewiston City, Maine

Lewiston City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lewiston City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lewiston City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lewiston City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lewiston City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lewiston City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lewiston City first amended its complaint on July 26, 2018. See City of Lewiston v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46315-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Lewiston City amended its complaint again on March 18, 2019. See City of Lewiston v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46315-DAP, ECF No. 93. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lewiston City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Lewiston City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lewiston City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lewiston City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Decl. (0.01% market share for Lewiston City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lewiston City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Lewiston City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Lewiston City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Lewiston City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Lewiston City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Lewiston City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lewiston City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Lewiston City's potential claims against them. Lewiston City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lewiston City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. 937. Washington County, Tennessee v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46317-DAP: Plaintiff Washington County, Tennessee

Washington County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Washington County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Washington County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Washington County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Washington County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Washington County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. 938. Lauderdale County, Tennessee v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46324-DAP: Plaintiff Lauderdale County, Tennessee

Lauderdale County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lauderdale County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lauderdale County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lauderdale County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lauderdale County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lauderdale County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above.

Moreover, Lauderdale County amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on December 6, 2018. See Lauderdale County, Tennessee v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46324-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lauderdale County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lauderdale County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lauderdale County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lauderdale County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Lauderdale County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Lauderdale County filed its original complaint on November 19, 2018, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—more than a year later. See Lauderdale County, Tennessee v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46324-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lauderdale County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lauderdale County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lauderdale County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lauderdale County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Lauderdale County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Lauderdale County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Lauderdale County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Lauderdale County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Lauderdale County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lauderdale County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Lauderdale County’s potential claims against them. Lauderdale County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Tennessee law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lauderdale County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Tennessee law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lauderdale County, a municipality in Tennessee, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lauderdale County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lauderdale County filed its original complaint on November 19, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Lauderdale County, Tennessee v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46324-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lauderdale County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Lauderdale County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lauderdale County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lauderdale County, a municipality in Tennessee, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

939. Montgomery County Board of County Commissioners et al. v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46326-DAP: Plaintiff Montgomery County, Ohio

Montgomery County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Montgomery County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Montgomery County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Montgomery County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Montgomery County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Montgomery County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Montgomery County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on December 13, 2018, as well as on May 19, 2021. See Montgomery County Board of County Commissioners et al. v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46326-DAP, ECF Nos. 27, 37, 46. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Montgomery County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints before its deadline to amend in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Montgomery County was then provided another opportunity to amend its complaint when it was selected as a pharmacy bellwether in 2021, ECF No. 3688, yet it still failed to add any PBMs. See Montgomery County Board of County Commissioners et al. v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46326-DAP, ECF No. 46. Prior Notice Through Counsel. Montgomery County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Montgomery County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Montgomery County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Montgomery County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Montgomery County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Montgomery County began receiving those services on July 1, 2011. See id. Inasmuch as Montgomery County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Montgomery County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Montgomery County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Montgomery County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Montgomery County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Montgomery County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Montgomery County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Montgomery County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Montgomery County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Montgomery County's potential claims against them. Montgomery County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Montgomery County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Montgomery County, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Montgomery County is a plaintiff in Ohio. Montgomery County’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Montgomery County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Montgomery County filed its original complaint on July 25, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Montgomery County Board of County Commissioners et al. v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46326-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Indeed, Montgomery County has previously used those same factual allegations to assert a RICO claim against other Defendants, but it declined to assert such a RICO claim against the PBMs. Montgomery County Board of County Commissioners et al. v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46326-DAP, ECF No. 46. Even assuming arguendo that Montgomery County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on July 25, 2022. Montgomery County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Montgomery County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Montgomery County, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

940. Davidson County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46330-DAP: Plaintiff Davidson County, North Carolina

Davidson County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Davidson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Davidson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Davidson County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Davidson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Davidson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Davidson County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on December 14, 2018. See Davidson County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46330-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Davidson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Davidson County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Davidson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Davidson County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Davidson County filed its original complaint on November 27, 2018. See Davidson County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46330-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Davidson County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Davidson County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Davidson County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Davidson County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Davidson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Davidson County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Davidson County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Davidson County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Davidson County filed its original complaint on November 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Davidson County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46330-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Davidson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Davidson County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Davidson County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Davidson County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

941. City of Bradenton v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46331-DAP: Plaintiff Bradenton City, Florida

Bradenton City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bradenton City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bradenton City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bradenton City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Bradenton City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bradenton City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bradenton City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on December 14, 2018. See City of Bradenton v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46331-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bradenton City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Bradenton City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Bradenton City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bradenton City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Bradenton City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey &

Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Bradenton City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Bradenton City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Bradenton City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.45% market share for Bradenton City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bradenton City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Bradenton City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Bradenton City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Bradenton City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Bradenton City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Bradenton City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Bradenton City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Bradenton City’s potential claims against them. Bradenton City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bradenton City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bradenton City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bradenton City filed its original complaint on November 20, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Bradenton v. injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bradenton City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Bradenton City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Bradenton City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on November 20, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bradenton City, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

942. Commissioners of St. Mary's County, Maryland v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46334-DAP: Plaintiff St. Marys County, Maryland

St. Marys County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Marys County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Marys County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St.

Marys County's motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Marys County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Maryland, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. St. Marys County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because St. Marys County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on November 23, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

943. City of Albany Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46337-DAP: Plaintiff Albany City, Georgia

Albany City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Albany City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Albany City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Albany City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Albany City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Albany City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Albany City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Albany City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

low to support a finding of good cause for Albany City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Albany City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Albany City filed its original complaint on November 20, 2018, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—more than a year later. See City of Albany Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46337-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Albany City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Albany City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Albany City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Albany City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Albany City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Albany City, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Albany City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Albany City filed its original complaint on November 20, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Albany Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46337-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Albany City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Albany City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Albany City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Albany City, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

944. City of Findlay v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46339-DAP: Plaintiff Findlay City, Ohio

Findlay City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Findlay City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Findlay City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Findlay City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Findlay City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Findlay City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Findlay City amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after the case was removed to the MDL on December 17, 2018. See City of Findlay v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46339-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Findlay City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Findlay City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Findlay City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Findlay City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Furthermore, in 2023, Findlay City filed a separate complaint in this MDL asserting new claims for public nuisance and negligence against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company, n/k/a Evernorth Health, Inc.; Merck-Medco, n/k/a Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; OptumRx, Inc.; and other defendants. See Cuyahoga County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., No. 1:23-op-45003 (N.D. Ohio), ECF No. 1. Findlay City offers no good cause for its failure to bring its proposed claims against all PBMs in the 2023 case, which is still pending. In addition, Findlay City’s improper claim-splitting between these two separate cases in the MDL should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (affirming dismissal for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Findlay City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Findlay City—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Findlay City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Findlay City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Findlay City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Findlay City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Findlay City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Findlay City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Findlay City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Findlay City's potential claims against them. Findlay City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Findlay City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Findlay City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Findlay City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Findlay City’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Findlay City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Findlay City filed its amended complaint on March 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Findlay v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46339-DAP, ECF No. 5. It is therefore indisputable that Findlay City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Findlay City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above.

Findlay City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Findlay City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

945. Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46344-DAP: Plaintiff Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties, Ohio

Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties' untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties' motion should be denied due to futility, as Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Mental Health &

Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties amended its complaint on March 16, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46344-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties' deadline to amend was in 2019. Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties' lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties filed its original complaint on December 19, 2018. See Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46344-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties' case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties' document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties' disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Mental Health & Recovery Services Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties is a plaintiff in Ohio. Mental Health & Recovery Services

Board of Allen, Auglaize and Hardin Counties’ request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

946. City of Van Wert v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46345-DAP: Plaintiff Van Wert City, Ohio

Van Wert City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Van Wert City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Van Wert City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Van Wert City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Van Wert City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

947. Webster County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46350-DAP: Plaintiff Webster County, Missouri

Webster County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Webster County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Webster County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Webster County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Webster County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Webster County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Webster County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Webster County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46350-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Webster County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Webster County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Webster County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Webster County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good Webster County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Webster County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Webster County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.18% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Webster County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Webster County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Webster County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Webster County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Webster County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Webster County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Webster County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Webster County's potential claims against them. Webster County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Webster County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Webster County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Webster County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Webster County filed its original complaint on December 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Webster County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46350-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Webster County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Webster County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Webster County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Webster County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

948. City of Norwalk v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46351-DAP: Plaintiff Norwalk City, Ohio

Norwalk City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Norwalk City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Norwalk City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Norwalk City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Norwalk City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Norwalk City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Norwalk City filed its original complaint on November 27, 2018 and the case was removed to the MDL on December 21, 2018. See City of Norwalk v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46351-DAP, ECF No. 1. Norwalk City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Norwalk City elected not to do so. Instead, Norwalk City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Norwalk City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459

(affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Norwalk City filed its original complaint on November 27, 2018. See City of Norwalk v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46351-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Norwalk City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Norwalk City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Norwalk City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Norwalk City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Norwalk City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court's repeated instructions to the contrary, Norwalk City has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Norwalk City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Norwalk City's failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Norwalk City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Norwalk City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Norwalk City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Norwalk City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Norwalk City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Norwalk City filed its original complaint on November 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Norwalk v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46351-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Norwalk City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on November 27, 2022. Norwalk City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Norwalk City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Norwalk City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

949. Moniteau County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46352-DAP: Plaintiff Moniteau County, Missouri

Moniteau County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Moniteau County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Moniteau County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Moniteau County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Moniteau County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Moniteau County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Moniteau County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Moniteau County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46352-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Moniteau County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Moniteau County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Moniteau County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Moniteau County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Moniteau County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Moniteau County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Moniteau County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Moniteau County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Moniteau County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Moniteau County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Moniteau County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Moniteau County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Moniteau County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

950. Hillsborough County, New Hampshire, v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46353-DAP: Plaintiff Hillsborough County, New Hampshire

Hillsborough County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hillsborough County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hillsborough County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hillsborough County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Hillsborough County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hillsborough County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hillsborough County amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. *See Hillsborough County, New Hampshire, v. Prior Notice Through Counsel. Hillsborough County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Hillsborough County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Hillsborough County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Hillsborough County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Hampshire law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hillsborough County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Hampshire law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hillsborough County, a municipality in New Hampshire, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

951. City of Utica, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46359-DAP: Plaintiff Utica City, New York

Utica City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Utica City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Utica City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs.

Moreover, Utica City's motion should be denied due to futility and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Utica City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Utica City amended its complaint on March 5, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on December 27, 2018. See City of Utica, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46359-DAP, ECF No. 42. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Utica City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Utica City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Utica City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Utica City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Utica City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Utica City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Utica City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.11% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Utica City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Utica City filed its original complaint on November 30, 2018. See City of Utica, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46359-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Utica City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Utica City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Utica City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Utica City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Utica City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Utica City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Utica City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Utica City filed its original complaint on November 30, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Utica, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46359-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Utica City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Utica City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Utica City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Utica City, a city in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Utica City's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

952. Anson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46364-DAP: Plaintiff Anson County, North Carolina

Anson County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Anson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Anson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Anson County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Anson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Anson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Anson County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on December 28, 2018. See Anson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46364-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Anson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Anson County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Anson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Anson County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Anson County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Anson County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Anson County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Anson County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.23% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Anson County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Anson County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Anson County filed its original complaint on December 6, 2018, but waited until September 25, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—nearly six years later. See Anson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46364-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 25, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Anson County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Anson County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Anson County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Anson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Anson County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Anson County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Anson County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Anson County filed its original complaint on December 6, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Anson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:18-op-46364-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Anson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Anson County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Anson County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Anson County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

953. County of Kent, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45000-DAP: Plaintiff Kent County, Michigan

Kent County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kent County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kent County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kent County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Kent County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Kent County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Kent County amended its complaint on March 16, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See County of Kent, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45000-DAP, ECF No. 19. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Kent County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Kent County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Kent County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Kent County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Kent County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Kent County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kent County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Kent County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.47% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kent County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Kent County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Kent County, a municipality in Michigan, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Kent County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Kent County filed its original complaint on January 3, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Kent, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45000-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Kent County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Kent County, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

954. Camden County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45001-DAP: Plaintiff Camden County, North Carolina

Camden County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Camden County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Camden County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Camden County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Camden County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Camden County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Camden County amended its complaint on April 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 7, 2019. See Camden County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45001-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Camden County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Camden County's deadline to amend was in 2019. implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. 955. Washington County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45002-DAP: Plaintiff Washington County, North Carolina

Washington County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Washington County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Washington County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Washington County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Washington County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Washington County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Washington County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Washington County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

956. Madison County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45006-DAP: Plaintiff Madison County, Alabama

Madison County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Madison County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Madison County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Madison County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Madison County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Madison County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Madison County amended its complaint on April 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 15, 2019. See Madison County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45006-DAP, ECF No. 39. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Madison County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Madison County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Madison County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Madison County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Madison County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Madison County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Madison County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Madison County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Madison County filed its original complaint on December 10, 2018, but waited until December 19, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—one year later. See Madison County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45006-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 19, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Madison County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Madison County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Madison County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Madison County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Madison County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Madison County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Madison County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Madison County filed its original complaint on December 10, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Madison County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45006-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Madison County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Madison County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Madison County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Madison County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Madison County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on December 10, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Madison County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Madison County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

957. City of Quincy v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45008-DAP: Plaintiff Quincy City, Massachusetts

Quincy City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Quincy City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Quincy City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Quincy City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Quincy City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Quincy City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Quincy City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 16, 2019. See City of Quincy v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45008-DAP, ECF No. 14. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Quincy City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Quincy City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Quincy City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Quincy City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Quincy City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Quincy City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Quincy City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Quincy City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Quincy City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Quincy City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Quincy City filed its original complaint on August 23, 2018. See City of Quincy v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45008-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Quincy City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Quincy City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Quincy City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Quincy City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Quincy City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Quincy City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Quincy City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Quincy City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Quincy City filed its amended complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Quincy v. Quincy City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13

(holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Quincy City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Quincy City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Quincy City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on August 23, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Quincy City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

958. City of Clearwater in the County of Pinellas v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45009-DAP: Plaintiff Clearwater City, Florida

Clearwater City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Clearwater City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Clearwater City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Clearwater City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Clearwater City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Purdue Pharma L.P. et al.*, Case No. 1:19-op-45009-DAP, ECF No. 27. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Clearwater City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Clearwater City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Clearwater City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Clearwater City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Clearwater City filed its original complaint on November 15, 2018. See City of Clearwater in the County of Pinellas v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45009-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Clearwater City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. 959. City of Saint Martinville v. AmerisourceBergen Corp et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45013-DAP: Plaintiff St. Martinville City, Louisiana

St. Martinville City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Martinville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Martinville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Martinville City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Martinville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Louisiana, public-nuisance claims are subject to an one-year limitations period. St. Martinville City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because St. Martinville City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on December 19, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. Martinville City, a municipality in Louisiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

960. Haywood County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45014-DAP: Plaintiff Haywood County, North Carolina

Haywood County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Haywood County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Haywood County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Haywood County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Haywood County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Haywood County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Haywood County amended its complaint on March 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 22, 2019. See Haywood County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45014-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Haywood County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Haywood County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Haywood County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Haywood County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Haywood County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Haywood County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Haywood County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Haywood County filed its original complaint on December 18, 2018. See Haywood County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45014-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Haywood County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Haywood County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Haywood County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Haywood County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Haywood County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Haywood County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Haywood County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Haywood County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Haywood County filed its original complaint on December 18, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Haywood County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45014-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Haywood County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Haywood County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Haywood County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Haywood County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

961. Unified Government of Wyandotte County/Kansas City, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45015-DAP: Plaintiff Kansas City City, Kansas

Kansas City City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kansas City City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kansas City City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kansas City City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Kansas City City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Kansas City City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Kansas City City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Kansas City City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Kansas City City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kansas City City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Kansas City City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Kansas City City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Kansas City City began receiving those services on January 2, 2013. See id. Inasmuch as Kansas City City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Kansas City City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Kansas City City’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s

962. Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45018-DAP: Plaintiff Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe, New York

Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe filed its original complaint on December 21, 2018. *See Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe v. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe, a native tribe in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe’s request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

963. County of Maricopa v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45020-DAP: Plaintiff Maricopa County, Arizona

Maricopa County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Maricopa County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Maricopa County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Maricopa County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Maricopa County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Maricopa County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. (0.10% market share for Maricopa County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Maricopa County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Maricopa County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.27% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Maricopa County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Arizona law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Maricopa County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Arizona law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

964. Town of Stoughton, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45023-DAP: Plaintiff Stoughton Town, Massachusetts

Stoughton Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Stoughton Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Stoughton Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Stoughton Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Stoughton Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Stoughton Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Stoughton Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 22, 2019. See Town of Stoughton, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45023-DAP, ECF No. 14. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Stoughton Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Stoughton Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Stoughton Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Stoughton Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Stoughton Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Stoughton Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Stoughton Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Stoughton Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Stoughton Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Stoughton Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Stoughton Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Stoughton Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Stoughton Town previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Stoughton Town of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Stoughton Town began receiving those services on August 1, 2019. See id. Inasmuch as Stoughton Town seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Stoughton Town knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct nearly five years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Stoughton Town’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Stoughton Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Stoughton Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Stoughton Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Stoughton Town filed its original complaint on December 20, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Stoughton, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45023-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Stoughton Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Stoughton Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Stoughton Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Stoughton Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Stoughton Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on December 20, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Stoughton Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

965. City of Anacortes et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45029-DAP: Plaintiff Anacortes City, Washington

Anacortes City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Anacortes City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Anacortes City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Anacortes City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Anacortes City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Anacortes City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Anacortes City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 24, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019 and March 25, 2021. See City of Anacortes et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45029-DAP, ECF Nos. 7, 8, 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Anacortes City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Anacortes City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Anacortes City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Anacortes City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

low to support a finding of good cause for Anacortes City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Anacortes City filed its original complaint on December 21, 2018. See City of Anacortes et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45029-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Anacortes City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Anacortes City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Anacortes City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Anacortes City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Anacortes City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Anacortes City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Anacortes City, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Anacortes City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Anacortes City filed its original complaint on December 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Anacortes et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45029-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Anacortes City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Anacortes City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Anacortes City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Anacortes City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Anacortes City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on December 21, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Anacortes City, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

966. Board of County Commissioners of the County of McKinley v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45033-DAP: Plaintiff McKinley County, New Mexico

McKinley County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. McKinley County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. McKinley County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, McKinley County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as McKinley County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. McKinley County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, McKinley County amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 28, 2019. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of McKinley v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45033-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, McKinley County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. McKinley County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. McKinley County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. McKinley County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after

(0.06% market share for McKinley County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for McKinley County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to McKinley County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.26% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for McKinley County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. McKinley County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. McKinley County filed its original complaint on January 11, 2019, but waited until December 24, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—nearly a year later. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of McKinley v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45033-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 24, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating McKinley County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of McKinley County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But McKinley County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. McKinley County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Thornton City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Thornton City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Thornton City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Thornton City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Thornton City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Thornton City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Thornton City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 28, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 30, 2020. See City of Thornton v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45034-DAP, ECF Nos. 10, 11, 16. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Thornton City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Thornton City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Thornton City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Thornton City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline);

Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Thornton City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Thornton City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Thornton City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Thornton City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Thornton City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Thornton City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Thornton City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Thornton City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Thornton City’s potential claims against them. Thornton City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Thornton City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Thornton City, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Thornton City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Thornton City, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

968. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Jefferson v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45035-DAP: Plaintiff Jefferson County, Colorado

Jefferson County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jefferson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Jefferson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Jefferson County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Jefferson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Jefferson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Jefferson County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 28, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 29, 2020. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Jefferson v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45035-DAP, ECF Nos. 10, 11, 16. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Jefferson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Jefferson County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Jefferson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Jefferson County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Jefferson County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.21% market share for Jefferson County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Jefferson County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Jefferson County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.37% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Jefferson County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Jefferson County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Jefferson County, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Jefferson County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Jefferson County filed its original complaint on January 11, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Jefferson v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45035-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Jefferson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Jefferson County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Jefferson County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Jefferson County, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

969. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Adams County, Colorado

Adams County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Adams County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Adams County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Adams County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Adams County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Adams County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Adams County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 28, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019 and January 20, 2021. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF Nos. 12, 15, 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Adams County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Adams County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Adams County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Adams County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Adams County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Adams County filed its original complaint on January 11, 2019, but waited until August 26, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—seven months later. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 26, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Adams County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Adams County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Adams County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Adams County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Adams County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Adams County, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Adams County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Adams County, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

970. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Arapahoe County, Colorado

Arapahoe County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Arapahoe County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Arapahoe County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Arapahoe County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Arapahoe County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Arapahoe County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Arapahoe County, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

971. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Aurora City, Colorado

Aurora City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Aurora City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Aurora City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Aurora City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Aurora City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Aurora City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Aurora City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 28, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019 and January 20, 2021. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF

Nos. 12, 15, 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Aurora City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Aurora City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Aurora City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Aurora City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Aurora City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Aurora City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Aurora City began receiving those services on August 26, 2007. See id. Inasmuch as Aurora City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Aurora City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Aurora City’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Aurora City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Aurora City filed its original complaint on January 11, 2019, but waited until September 13, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—five years later. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 13, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Aurora City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Aurora City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Aurora City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Aurora City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Aurora City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Aurora City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Aurora City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Aurora City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Aurora City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Aurora City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Aurora City’s potential claims against them. Aurora City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Aurora City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Aurora City, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Aurora City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Aurora City filed its original complaint on January 11, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Aurora City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Aurora City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Aurora City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Aurora City, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

972. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Black Hawk City, Colorado

Black Hawk City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Black Hawk City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Black Hawk City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Black Hawk City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Black Hawk City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Black Hawk City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Black Hawk City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Black Hawk City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Black Hawk City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Black Hawk City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Black Hawk City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Black Hawk City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Black Hawk City, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

973. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Boulder County, Colorado

Boulder County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Boulder County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Boulder County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Boulder County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Boulder County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Boulder County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.12% market share for Boulder County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Boulder County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Boulder County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.41% market share). Failure to State a Claim. Boulder County, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Boulder County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Boulder County filed its original complaint on January 11, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants.

See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Boulder County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Boulder County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Boulder County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Boulder County, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

974. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Broomfield City, Colorado

Broomfield City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Broomfield City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Broomfield City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Broomfield City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Broomfield City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Broomfield City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Broomfield City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 28, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019 and January 20, 2021. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF Nos. 12, 15, 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Broomfield City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Broomfield City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Broomfield City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Broomfield City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Broomfield City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.11% market share for Broomfield City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Broomfield City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

support a finding of good cause for Broomfield City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Broomfield City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Broomfield City filed its original complaint on January 11, 2019, but waited until September 16, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—five years later. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 16, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Broomfield City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Broomfield City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Broomfield City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Broomfield City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Broomfield City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Broomfield City, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

975. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Commerce City City, Colorado

Commerce City City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Commerce City City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Commerce City City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Commerce City City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Commerce City City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

977. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Fremont County, Colorado

Fremont County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fremont County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fremont County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fremont County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Fremont County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Fremont County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Fremont County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Fremont County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Fremont County, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

978. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Hudson Town, Colorado

Hudson Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hudson Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hudson Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hudson Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Hudson Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hudson Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hudson Town amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 28, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019 and January 20, 2021. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF Nos. 12, 15, 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hudson Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Hudson Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Hudson Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hudson Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Hudson Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Hudson Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Hudson Town’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Hudson Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Hudson Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Hudson Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Hudson Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Hudson Town’s potential claims against them. Hudson Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hudson Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Hudson Town, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hudson Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hudson Town filed its original complaint on January 11, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Hudson Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Hudson Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Hudson Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hudson Town, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

979. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Larimer County, Colorado

Larimer County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Larimer County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Larimer County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Larimer County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Larimer County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Larimer County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Larimer County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 28, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019 and January 20, 2021. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF Nos. 12, 15, 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Larimer County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Larimer County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Larimer County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Larimer County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Larimer County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Larimer County, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Larimer County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Larimer County filed its original complaint on January 11, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Larimer County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Larimer County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Larimer County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Larimer County, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

980. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Northglenn City, Colorado

Northglenn City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Northglenn City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Northglenn City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Northglenn City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Northglenn City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Northglenn City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.39% market share for Northglenn City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Northglenn City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Northglenn City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.36% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Northglenn City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Northglenn City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

981. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Teller County, Colorado

Teller County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Teller County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Teller County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Teller County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Teller County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Teller County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Teller County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on January 28, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019 and January 20, 2021. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP, ECF Nos. 12, 15, 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Teller County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Teller County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Teller County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Teller County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Teller County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Teller County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Teller County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Teller County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Teller County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Teller County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Teller County’s potential claims against them. Teller County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Teller County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Teller County, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Teller County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Teller County filed its original complaint on January 11, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Teller County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Teller County, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

982. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Adams, et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45036-DAP: Plaintiff Westminster City, Colorado

Westminster City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Westminster City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Westminster City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Westminster City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Westminster City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Westminster City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.11% market share for Westminster City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Westminster City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Westminster City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.38% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Westminster City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Westminster City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Westminster City, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

983. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria et al. v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45038-DAP: Plaintiff Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria, California

Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria's motion should be denied due to futility, as Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria et al. v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45038-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria's deadline to amend was in 2019. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria filed its original complaint on January 28, 2019. See Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria et al. v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45038-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria, a native tribe in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria filed its original complaint on January 28, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria et al. v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45038-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Cahto Indian Tribe of the Laytonville Rancheria, a native tribe in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

984. Town of Dedham, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45039-DAP: Plaintiff Dedham Town, Massachusetts

Dedham Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dedham Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dedham Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dedham Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Dedham Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dedham Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Dedham Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 4, 2019. See Town of Dedham, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45039-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Dedham Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Dedham Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Dedham Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Dedham Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Dedham Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Dedham Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Dedham Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs

in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Dedham Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Dedham Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Dedham Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Dedham Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.26% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Dedham Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Dedham Town filed its original complaint on December 20, 2018. See Town of Dedham, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45039-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Dedham Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Dedham Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Dedham Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Dedham Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Dedham Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Dedham Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Dedham Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Dedham Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Dedham Town filed its original complaint on December 20, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Dedham, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45039-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Dedham Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Dedham Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Dedham Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Dedham Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Dedham Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five and a half years after filing its original complaint on December 20, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Dedham Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

985. Duplin County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45040-DAP: Plaintiff Duplin County, North Carolina

Duplin County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Duplin County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Duplin County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Duplin County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Duplin County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Duplin County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Duplin County amended its complaint on May 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 4, 2019. See Duplin County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45040-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Duplin County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Duplin County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Duplin County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Duplin County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Duplin County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Duplin County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Duplin County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Duplin County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Duplin County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Duplin County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Duplin County filed its original complaint on January 18, 2019. See Duplin County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45040-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case five and a half years ago, Duplin County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Duplin County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Duplin County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45040-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Duplin County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. 986. Manatee County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45044-DAP: Plaintiff Manatee County, Florida

Manatee County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Manatee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Manatee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Manatee County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Manatee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Manatee County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al.*, Case No. 1:19-op-45044-DAP, ECF No. 8. Manatee County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Manatee County elected not to do so. Instead, Manatee County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Manatee County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Polk County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Polk County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. (0.04% market share for Polk County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Polk County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Polk County filed its original complaint on January 16, 2019. See Polk County, Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, Case No. 1:19-op-45046-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Polk County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Polk County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Polk County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Polk County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Polk County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Polk County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Polk County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Polk County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Polk County filed its original complaint on January 16, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Polk County, Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, Case No. 1:19-op-45046-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Polk County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Polk County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Polk County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Polk County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

989. Westwego City v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45047-DAP: Plaintiff Westwego City, Louisiana

Westwego City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Westwego City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Westwego City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Westwego City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Westwego City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Westwego City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Westwego City filed its original complaint on January 17, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on February 5, 2019. See Westwego City v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45047-DAP, ECF No. 9. Westwego City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Westwego City elected not to do so. Instead, Westwego City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Westwego City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Westwego City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.001% market share for Westwego City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Westwego City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Westwego City filed its original complaint on January 17, 2019. See Westwego City v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45047-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Westwego City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Westwego City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Westwego City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Westwego City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Westwego City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court's repeated instructions to the contrary, Westwego City has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Westwego City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Westwego City's failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Louisiana law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Westwego City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Louisiana law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Westwego City, a municipality in Louisiana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Westwego City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Westwego City filed its original complaint on January 17, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Westwego City v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45047-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Westwego City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Westwego City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Westwego City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Louisiana, public-nuisance claims are subject to an one-year limitations period. Westwego City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Westwego City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five and a half years after filing its original complaint on January 17, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Westwego City, a municipality in Louisiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

990. City of Columbia, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45048-DAP: Plaintiff Columbia City, Mississippi

Columbia City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Columbia City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Columbia City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Columbia City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Columbia City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Columbia City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Columbia City amended its complaint on May 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 5, 2019. See City of Columbia, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45048-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Columbia City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Columbia City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Columbia City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Columbia City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Columbia City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Columbia City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Columbia City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Columbia City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.09% market share for Columbia City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Columbia City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Columbia City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.13% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Columbia City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Columbia City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Columbia City filed its original complaint on January 16, 2019, but waited until December 18, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—eleven months later. See City of Columbia, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45048-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 18, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Columbia City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Columbia City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Columbia City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

991. Pamlico County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45049-DAP: Plaintiff Pamlico County, North Carolina

Pamlico County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pamlico County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pamlico County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pamlico County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Pamlico County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

992. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Taos v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45051-DAP: Plaintiff Taos County, New Mexico

Taos County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Taos County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Taos County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Taos County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Taos County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

(0.05% market share for Taos County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Taos County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Taos County filed its original complaint on January 18, 2019. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Taos v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45051-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Taos County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Taos County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Taos County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Taos County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Taos County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Taos County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Taos County, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Taos County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Taos County filed its original complaint on January 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Taos v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45051-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Taos County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Taos County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Taos County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Taos County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

993. Rio Arriba County, New Mexico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45054-DAP: Plaintiff Rio Arriba County, New Mexico

Rio Arriba County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rio Arriba County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rio Arriba County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rio Arriba County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Rio Arriba County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Rio Arriba County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rio Arriba County first amended its complaint on November 13, 2018. See Rio Arriba County, New Mexico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45054-DAP, ECF No. 1-4. Rio Arriba County amended its complaint again on March 18, 2019. See Rio Arriba County, New Mexico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45054-DAP, ECF No. 17. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Rio Arriba County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Rio Arriba County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Rio Arriba County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Rio Arriba County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Rio Arriba County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Rio Arriba County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Rio Arriba County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F.

App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Rio Arriba County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Rio Arriba County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Rio Arriba County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Rio Arriba County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Rio Arriba County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Rio Arriba County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Rio Arriba County's potential claims against them. Rio Arriba County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Rio Arriba County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Rio Arriba County, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Rio Arriba County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Rio Arriba County filed its second amended complaint on March 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Rio Arriba County, New Mexico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45054-DAP, ECF No. 17. It is therefore indisputable that Rio Arriba County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Rio Arriba County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Rio Arriba County's request for leave to amend to add a

RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Rio Arriba County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

994. People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45055-DAP: Plaintiff St. Clair County, Illinois

St. Clair County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Clair County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Clair County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Clair County's motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Clair County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. St. Clair County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, St. Clair County filed its original complaint on August 14, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on February 8, 2019. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45055-DAP, ECF No. 36. St. Clair County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, St. Clair County elected not to do so. Instead, St. Clair County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. St. Clair County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to St. Clair County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for St. Clair County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Clair County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to St. Clair County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.38% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Clair County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. St. Clair County filed its original complaint on August 14, 2018. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45055-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, St. Clair County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating St. Clair County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of St. Clair County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by St. Clair County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and St. Clair County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court's repeated instructions to the contrary, St. Clair County has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. St. Clair County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. St. Clair County's failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But St. Clair County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. St. Clair County, a municipality in Illinois, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. St. Clair County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: People of the State of Illinois, et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP, et al., No. 1:17-op-45048-DAP; and People of the State of Illinois, et al. v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-45055-DAP. St. Clair County’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff Filed a Separate PBM Case. St. Clair County previously filed an opioid case outside the MDL against the PBMs on December 15, 2023. See St. Clair County v. Evernorth Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 3:24-cv-00189 (S.D. Ill.), ECF No. 1-1. St. Clair County also voluntarily dismissed its claims against the PBMs in that case. Id., ECF No. 31. By suing the PBMs outside the MDL in 2023, St. Clair County shows that it possessed facts to assert claims against the PBMs before it moved to amend in the MDL, precluding a showing of good cause here. See Profitt, 2024 WL 3622448, at *4 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff previously possessed documents showing underlying factual basis for proposed claim).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for St. Clair County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. St. Clair County filed its original complaint on August 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Teva Pharmaceuticals USA, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45055-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that St. Clair County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on August 14, 2022. St. Clair County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. St. Clair County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. Clair County, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

995. Town of Athol v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45058-DAP: Plaintiff Athol Town, Massachusetts

Athol Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Athol Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Athol Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Athol Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Athol Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Athol Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Athol Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 11, 2019. See Town of Athol v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45058-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Athol Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Athol Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Athol Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Athol Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Athol Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Athol Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Athol Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Athol Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.005% market share for Athol Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Athol Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Athol Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.04% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Athol Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Athol Town violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Athol Town filed its original complaint on January 22, 2019, but waited until December 19, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—eleven months later. See Town of Athol v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45058-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 19, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Athol Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Athol Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Athol Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Athol Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Athol Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Athol Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Athol Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Athol Town filed its original complaint on January 22, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Athol v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45058-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Athol Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Athol Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Athol Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Athol Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Athol Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five and a half years after filing its original complaint on January 22, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Athol Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

996. Town of Rehoboth v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45059-DAP: Plaintiff Rehoboth Town, Massachusetts

Rehoboth Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rehoboth Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rehoboth Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rehoboth Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Rehoboth Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Rehoboth Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rehoboth Town amended its complaint on March 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 11, 2019. See Town of Rehoboth v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45059-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Rehoboth Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Rehoboth Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Rehoboth Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Rehoboth Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Rehoboth Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Rehoboth Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Rehoboth Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Rehoboth Town filed its original complaint on January 23, 2019. See Town of Rehoboth v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45059-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Rehoboth Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Rehoboth Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Rehoboth Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Rehoboth Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Rehoboth Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Rehoboth Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Rehoboth Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Rehoboth Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Rehoboth Town filed its original complaint on January 23, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Rehoboth v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45059-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Rehoboth Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Rehoboth Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Rehoboth Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Rehoboth Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Rehoboth Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five and a half years after filing its original complaint on January 23, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Rehoboth Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

997. Town of Fairhaven, MA v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45060-DAP: Plaintiff Fairhaven Town, Massachusetts

Fairhaven Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fairhaven Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fairhaven Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fairhaven Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Fairhaven Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fairhaven Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Fairhaven Town amended its complaint on March 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 11, 2019. See Town of Fairhaven, MA v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45060-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Fairhaven Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Fairhaven Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Fairhaven Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Fairhaven Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Decl. (0.01% market share for Fairhaven Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Fairhaven Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Fairhaven Town violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Fairhaven Town filed its original complaint on January 23, 2019, but waited until January 28, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—one year later. See Town of Fairhaven, MA v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45060-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: January 28, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Fairhaven Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Fairhaven Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Fairhaven Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Fairhaven Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. 998. Town of Norwood v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45061-DAP: Plaintiff Norwood Town, Massachusetts

Norwood Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Norwood Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Norwood Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Norwood Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Norwood Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Brookline Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Brookline Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five and a half years after filing its original complaint on January 22, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Brookline Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1000. Town of Scituate v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45063-DAP: Plaintiff Scituate Town, Massachusetts

Scituate Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Scituate Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Scituate Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Scituate Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Scituate Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Scituate Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Scituate Town amended its complaint on May 10, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 12, 2019. See Town of Scituate v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45063-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Scituate Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Scituate Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Scituate Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Scituate Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Scituate Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Scituate Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Scituate Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Scituate Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Scituate Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Scituate Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Scituate Town filed its original complaint on January 23, 2019. See Town of Scituate v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No.

1:19-op-45063-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Scituate Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Scituate Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Scituate Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Scituate Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Scituate Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Scituate Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Scituate Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Scituate Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Scituate Town filed its original complaint on January 23, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Scituate v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45063-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Scituate Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Scituate Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Scituate Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Scituate Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Scituate Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five and a half years after filing its original complaint on January 23, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Scituate Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1001. County of Brevard, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45064-DAP: Plaintiff Brevard County, Florida

Brevard County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Brevard County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Brevard County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Brevard County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Brevard County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Brevard County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Brevard County amended its complaint on May 10, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 12, 2019. See County of Brevard, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45064-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Brevard County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Brevard County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Brevard County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Brevard County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Brevard County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.09% market share for Brevard County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Brevard County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Brevard County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.39% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Brevard County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Brevard County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Brevard County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Brevard County began receiving those services on January 3, 2020. See id. Inasmuch as Brevard County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Brevard County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than four years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Brevard County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Brevard County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Brevard County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Brevard County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Brevard County filed its original complaint on January 23, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Brevard, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45064-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Brevard County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Brevard County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Brevard County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Brevard County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Brevard County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on January 23, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Brevard County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1002. Town of Orange, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45070-DAP: Plaintiff Orange Town, Massachusetts

Orange Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Orange Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Orange Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Orange Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Orange Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Orange Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Orange Town amended its complaint on March 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 14, 2019. See Town of Orange, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45070-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Orange Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Orange Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Orange Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Orange Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Orange Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Orange Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Orange Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Orange Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Orange Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Orange Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Orange Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Orange Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Orange Town filed its original complaint on December 20, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Orange, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45070-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Orange Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. Orange Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Orange Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Orange Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Orange Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—six years after filing its original complaint on December 20, 2018—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Orange Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1003. City of Florence Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45073-DAP: Plaintiff Florence City, Alabama

Florence City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Florence City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Florence City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Florence City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Florence City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Florence City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Florence City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 15, 2019. See City of Florence Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45073-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Florence City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Florence City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Florence City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Florence City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Florence City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Florence City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Florence City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

units shipped to Florence City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.33% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Florence City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Florence City filed its original complaint on January 31, 2019. See City of Florence Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45073-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Florence City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Florence City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Florence City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Florence City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Florence City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Florence City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Florence City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Florence City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Florence City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Florence City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1

(emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Florence City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Florence City’s potential claims against them. Florence City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Florence City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Florence City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Florence City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Florence City filed its original complaint on January 31, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Florence Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45073-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Florence City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Florence City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Florence City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Florence City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Florence City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on January 31, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Florence City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1004. Ho-Chunk Nation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45076-DAP: Plaintiff Ho-Chunk Nation, Wisconsin

Ho-Chunk Nation's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ho-Chunk Nation failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ho-Chunk Nation also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ho-Chunk Nation's motion should be denied due to futility, as Ho-Chunk Nation does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ho-Chunk Nation was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ho-Chunk Nation amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Ho-Chunk Nation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45076-DAP, ECF No. 18. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ho-Chunk Nation declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Ho-Chunk Nation’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Ho-Chunk Nation waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ho-Chunk Nation’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Ho-Chunk Nation filed its original complaint on February 15, 2019. See Ho-Chunk Nation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45076-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Ho-Chunk Nation never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Ho-Chunk Nation's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Ho-Chunk Nation's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Ho-Chunk Nation's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Ho-Chunk Nation therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Ho-Chunk Nation's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Ho-Chunk Nation, a native tribe in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Ho-Chunk Nation's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Ho-Chunk Nation filed its original complaint on February 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Ho-Chunk Nation v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45076-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Ho-Chunk Nation knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Ho-Chunk Nation's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Ho-Chunk Nation's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ho-Chunk Nation, a native tribe in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1005. Town of Tewksbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45077-DAP: Plaintiff Tewksbury Town, Massachusetts

Tewksbury Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Tewksbury Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Tewksbury Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Tewksbury Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Tewksbury Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Tewksbury Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Tewksbury Town amended its complaint on May 10, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 19, 2019. See Town of Tewksbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45077-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Tewksbury Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Tewksbury Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Tewksbury Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Tewksbury Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Tewksbury Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Tewksbury Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Tewksbury Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Tewksbury Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Tewksbury Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Tewksbury Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Tewksbury Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.07% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Tewksbury Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Tewksbury Town filed its original complaint on January 23, 2019. See Town of Tewksbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45077-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Tewksbury Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Tewksbury Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Tewksbury Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Tewksbury Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Tewksbury Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Tewksbury Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Tewksbury Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Tewksbury Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Tewksbury Town filed its original complaint on January 23, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Tewksbury v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45077-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Tewksbury Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Tewksbury Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Tewksbury Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Tewksbury Town's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Tewksbury Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on January 23, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Tewksbury Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1006. City of Nanticoke, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45081-DAP: Plaintiff Nanticoke City, Pennsylvania

Nanticoke City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Nanticoke City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Nanticoke City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Nanticoke City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Nanticoke City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Nanticoke City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Nanticoke City amended its complaint on May 23, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 25, 2019. See City of Nanticoke, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45081-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Nanticoke City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Nanticoke City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Nanticoke City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Nanticoke City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Nanticoke City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Nanticoke City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Nanticoke City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Nanticoke City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Nanticoke City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Nanticoke City filed its original complaint on February 2, 2019. See City of Nanticoke, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45081-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Nanticoke City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Nanticoke City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Nanticoke City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Nanticoke City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Nanticoke City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Nanticoke City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Nanticoke City, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Nanticoke City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Nanticoke City filed its original complaint on February

4, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Nanticoke, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45081-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Nanticoke City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Nanticoke City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Nanticoke City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Nanticoke City, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1007. City of Great Falls et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45083-DAP: Plaintiff Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, Montana

Anaconda-Deer Lodge County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Anaconda-Deer Lodge County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Anaconda-Deer Lodge County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Anaconda-Deer Lodge County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 25, 2019. See City of Great Falls et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45083-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Anaconda-Deer Lodge County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Anaconda-Deer Lodge County’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Anaconda-Deer Lodge County cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.05% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Anaconda-Deer Lodge County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County filed its original complaint on February 6, 2019. See City of Great Falls et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45083-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Anaconda-Deer Lodge County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Anaconda-Deer Lodge County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Anaconda-Deer Lodge County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Anaconda-Deer Lodge County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Anaconda-Deer Lodge County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Anaconda-Deer Lodge County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Anaconda-Deer Lodge County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Anaconda-Deer Lodge County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Anaconda-Deer Lodge County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Anaconda-Deer Lodge County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Anaconda-Deer Lodge County’s potential claims against them. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, a municipality in Montana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Anaconda-Deer Lodge County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County filed its original complaint on February 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Great Falls et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45083-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Anaconda-Deer Lodge County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, a municipality in Montana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1008. City of Great Falls et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45083-DAP: Plaintiff Great Falls City, Montana

Great Falls City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Great Falls City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Great Falls City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Great Falls City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Great Falls City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Great Falls City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Great Falls City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 25, 2019. See City of Great Falls et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45083-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Great Falls City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Great Falls City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Great Falls City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Great Falls City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Great Falls City filed its original complaint on February 6, 2019. See City of Great Falls et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45083-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Great Falls City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Great Falls City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Great Falls City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Great Falls City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Great Falls City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Great Falls City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Great Falls City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Great Falls City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Great Falls City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Great Falls City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Great Falls City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Great Falls City's potential claims against them. Great Falls City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Great Falls City, a municipality in Montana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Great Falls City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Great Falls City filed its original complaint on February 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Great Falls et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45083-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Great Falls City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Great Falls City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Great Falls City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Great Falls City, a municipality in Montana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Lake County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lake County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lake County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lake County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lake County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lake County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Lake County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.16% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lake County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lake County filed its original complaint on February 6, 2019. *See City of Great Falls et al. v. 1010. City of Great Falls et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45083-DAP: Plaintiff Missoula City, Montana

Missoula City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Missoula City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Missoula City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Missoula City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Missoula City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Missoula City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Missoula City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

units shipped to Missoula City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.23% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Missoula City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Missoula City filed its original complaint on February 6, 2019. *See City of Great Falls et al. v. Under this Court’s orders, Missoula City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Missoula City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Missoula City’s potential claims against them. Missoula City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Missoula City, a municipality in Montana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1011. Autauga County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45086-DAP: Plaintiff Autauga County, Alabama

Autauga County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Autauga County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Autauga County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Autauga County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Autauga County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Autauga County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Autauga County filed its original complaint on February 4, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on February 25, 2019. See Autauga County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45086-DAP, ECF No. 22. Autauga County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Autauga County elected not to do so. Instead, Autauga County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Autauga County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Autauga County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Autauga County filed its original complaint on February 4, 2019. See Autauga County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45086-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Autauga County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Autauga County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Autauga County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Autauga County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Autauga County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Autauga County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Autauga County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Autauga County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Autauga County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Autauga County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Autauga County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Autauga County's potential claims against them. Autauga County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Autauga County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Autauga County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Autauga County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Autauga County filed its original complaint on February 4, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Autauga County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45086-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Autauga County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Autauga County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Autauga County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Autauga County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Autauga County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on February 4, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Autauga County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Autauga County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1012. County Commissioners of Charles County, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45094-DAP: Plaintiff Charles County, Maryland

Charles County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Charles County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Charles County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Charles County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Charles County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Charles County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Charles County amended its complaint on March 16, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on February 26, 2019. See County Commissioners of Charles County, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45094-DAP, ECF No. 13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Charles County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Charles County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Charles County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Charles County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Charles County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Charles County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Charles County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.36% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Charles County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Charles County filed its original complaint on February 4, 2019. See County Commissioners of Charles County, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45094-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Charles County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Charles County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Charles County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Charles County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Charles County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maryland law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Charles County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maryland law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Charles County, a municipality in Maryland, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Charles County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Charles County filed its original complaint on February 4, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County Commissioners of Charles County, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45094-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Charles County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Charles County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Charles County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Maryland, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Charles County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Charles County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on February 4, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Charles County, a municipality in Maryland, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1013. Noble County, Ohio v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45096-DAP: Plaintiff Noble County, Ohio

Noble County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Noble County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Noble County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Noble County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Noble County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Noble County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Noble County filed its original complaint on October 3, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on February 26, 2019. See Noble County, Ohio v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45096-DAP, ECF No. 45. Noble County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Noble County elected not to do so. Instead, Noble County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Noble County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704

F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Noble County filed its original complaint on October 3, 2018. See Noble County, Ohio v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45096-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Noble County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Noble County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Noble County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Noble County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Noble County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Noble County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Noble County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Noble County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Noble County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Noble County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Noble County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Noble County’s potential claims against them. Noble County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Noble County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Noble County, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Noble County is a plaintiff in Ohio. Noble County's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Noble County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Noble County filed its original complaint on October 3, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Noble County, Ohio v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45096-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Noble County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on October 3, 2022. Noble County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Noble County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Noble County, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1014. Grant County, New Mexico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45108-DAP: Plaintiff Grant County, New Mexico

Grant County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Grant County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Grant County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Grant County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Grant County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Grant County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Grant County amended its complaint on March 18, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Grant County, New Mexico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45108-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Grant County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Grant County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Grant County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Grant County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Grant County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Grant County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Grant County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Grant County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Grant County, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Grant County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Grant County filed its original complaint on March 4, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Grant County, New Mexico v. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Grant County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1015. Mennonite General Hospital, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45109-DAP: Plaintiff Hospital Menonita Caguas, Inc., Puerto Rico

Hospital Menonita Caguas, Inc.’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hospital Menonita Caguas, Inc. failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hospital Menonita Caguas, Inc. also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hospital Menonita Caguas, Inc.’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Hospital Menonita Caguas, Inc. does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hospital Menonita Caguas, Inc. was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Hospital Menonita Gauyama, Inc.'s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mennonite General Hospital, Inc.'s deadline to amend was in 2019. Mennonite General Hospital, Inc. waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mennonite General Hospital, Inc.'s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Mennonite General Hospital, Inc. filed its original complaint on March 4, 2019. See Mennonite General Hospital, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45109-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Mennonite General Hospital, Inc. never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Mennonite General Hospital, Inc.'s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Mennonite General Hospital, Inc.'s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Mennonite General Hospital, Inc.'s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Mennonite General Hospital, Inc. therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Mennonite General Hospital, Inc., a hospital in Puerto Rico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Mennonite General Hospital, Inc.'s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Mennonite General Hospital, Inc. filed its original complaint on March 4, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Mennonite General Hospital, Inc. et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45109-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Mennonite General Hospital, Inc. knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Mennonite General Hospital, Inc.'s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Mennonite General Hospital, Inc.’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Mennonite General Hospital, Inc., a hospital in Puerto Rico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1018. City of Medford v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45110-DAP: Plaintiff Medford City, Massachusetts

Medford City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Medford City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Medford City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Medford City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Medford City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Medford City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Medford City filed its original complaint on February 11, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 5, 2019. See City of Medford v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45110-DAP, ECF No. 8. Medford City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Medford City elected not to do so. Instead, Medford City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Medford City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Medford City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Medford City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Medford City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Medford City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Medford City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Medford City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Medford City's potential claims against them. Medford City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Medford City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Medford City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Medford City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Medford City filed its original complaint on February 11, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants.

See City of Medford v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45110-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Medford City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Medford City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Medford City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Medford City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Medford City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on February 11, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Medford City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1019. Missoula County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45112-DAP: Plaintiff Missoula County, Montana

Missoula County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Missoula County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Missoula County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Missoula County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Missoula County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Missoula County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Missoula County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on March 5, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 22, 2020. See Missoula County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45112-DAP, ECF Nos. 5, 6, 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Missoula County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Missoula County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Missoula County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Missoula County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Missoula County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.31% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Missoula County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Missoula County, a municipality in Montana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Missoula County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Missoula County filed its original complaint on January 22, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Missoula County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45112-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Missoula County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Missoula County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Missoula County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Missoula County, a municipality in Montana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1020. Harrison County, Mississippi v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45113-DAP: Plaintiff Harrison County, Mississippi

Harrison County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Harrison County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Harrison County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Harrison County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Harrison County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Harrison County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Harrison County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Harrison County, Mississippi v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45113-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Harrison County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Harrison County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Harrison County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Harrison County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Harrison County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.13% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Harrison County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Harrison County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Harrison County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Harrison County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Harrison County filed its original complaint on March 5, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Harrison County, Mississippi v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45113-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Harrison County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Harrison County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Harrison County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Harrison County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1021. County of Mohave v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45117-DAP: Plaintiff Mohave County, Arizona

Mohave County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mohave County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mohave County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mohave County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Mohave County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Mohave County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Mohave County amended its complaint on March 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on March 11, 2019, as well as on May 28, 2019 and December 29, 2020. See County of Mohave v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45117-DAP, ECF Nos. 8, 9, 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Mohave County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Mohave County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Mohave County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mohave County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Mohave County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Mohave County filed its original complaint on February 15, 2019, but waited until September 12, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years and six months later. See County of Mohave v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45117-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 12, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Mohave County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Mohave County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Mohave County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Mohave County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Arizona law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Mohave County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Arizona law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Mohave County, a municipality in Arizona, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Mohave County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Mohave County filed its original complaint on February 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Mohave v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45117-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Mohave County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Mohave County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Mohave County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Mohave County, a municipality in Arizona, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1022. Town of Dennis v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45124-DAP: Plaintiff Dennis Town, Massachusetts

Dennis Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dennis Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dennis Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dennis Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Dennis Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dennis Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Dennis Town amended its complaint on June 10, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on March 11, 2019. See Town of Dennis v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45124-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Dennis Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Dennis Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Dennis Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Dennis Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Dennis Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey &

Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Dennis Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Dennis Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Dennis Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Dennis Town filed its original complaint on February 18, 2019. See Town of Dennis v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45124-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Dennis Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Dennis Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Dennis Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Dennis Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Dennis Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Dennis Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Dennis Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Dennis Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Dennis Town filed its original complaint on February 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Dennis v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45124-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Dennis Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Dennis Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Dennis Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Dennis Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Dennis Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on February 18, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Dennis Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1023. Town of Provincetown v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45125-DAP: Plaintiff Provincetown Town, Massachusetts

Provincetown Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Provincetown Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Provincetown Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Provincetown Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Provincetown Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Provincetown Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Provincetown Town amended its complaint on June 10, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on March 11, 2019. See Town of Provincetown v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45125-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Provincetown Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Provincetown Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Provincetown Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Provincetown Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704

F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Provincetown Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Provincetown Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Provincetown Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Provincetown Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Provincetown Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Provincetown Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Provincetown Town filed its original complaint on February 15, 2019. See Town of Provincetown v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45125-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Provincetown Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Provincetown Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Provincetown Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Provincetown Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Provincetown Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Provincetown Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time.

That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Provincetown Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Provincetown Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Provincetown Town filed its original complaint on February 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Provincetown v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45125-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Provincetown Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Provincetown Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Provincetown Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Provincetown Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Provincetown Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on February 15, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Provincetown Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1024. County of San Mateo v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45126-DAP: Plaintiff San Mateo County, California

San Mateo County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. San Mateo County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. San Mateo County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, San Mateo County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as San Mateo County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. San Mateo County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, San Mateo County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on March 11, 2019. *See County of San Mateo v. Unlike many other plaintiffs, San Mateo County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. San Mateo County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. San Mateo County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. San Mateo County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to San Mateo County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.13% market share for San Mateo County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for San Mateo County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to San Mateo County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.36% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for San Mateo County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to State a Claim. San Mateo County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

San Mateo County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. San Mateo County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1025. County of Santa Barbara et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45128-DAP: Plaintiff Santa Barbara County, California

Santa Barbara County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Santa Barbara County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Santa Barbara County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Santa Barbara County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Santa Barbara County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Santa Barbara County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above.

Moreover, Santa Barbara County amended its complaint on June 5, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on March 12, 2019, as well as on January 7, 2021. See County of Santa Barbara et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45128-DAP, ECF Nos. 19, 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Santa Barbara County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Santa Barbara County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Santa Barbara County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Santa Barbara County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Santa Barbara County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.16% market share for Santa Barbara County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Santa Barbara County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Santa Barbara County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Santa Barbara County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Santa Barbara County began receiving those services on July 7, 2007. See id. Inasmuch as Santa Barbara County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Santa Barbara County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Santa Barbara County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Santa Barbara County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Santa Barbara County filed its original complaint on February 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See County of Santa Barbara et al. v. Santa Barbara County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Santa Barbara County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1026. City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45129-DAP: Plaintiff Arlington City, Georgia

Arlington City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Arlington City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Arlington City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Arlington City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Arlington City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Arlington City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Arlington City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45129-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Arlington City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Arlington City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Arlington City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Arlington City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Arlington City's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Arlington City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Arlington City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Arlington City filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019. See City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45129-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Arlington City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Arlington City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Arlington City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Arlington City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Arlington City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Arlington City has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Arlington City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Arlington City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Arlington City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Arlington City, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Arlington City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Arlington City filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45129-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Arlington City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Arlington City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Arlington City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Arlington City, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1027. City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45129-DAP: Plaintiff Blakely City, Georgia

Blakely City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Blakely City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Blakely City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Blakely City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Blakely City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Blakely City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Blakely City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45129-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Blakely City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Blakely City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Blakely City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Blakely City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Blakely City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.003% market share for Blakely City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Blakely City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Blakely City filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019. See City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45129-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Blakely City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Blakely City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Blakely City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Blakely City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Blakely City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Blakely City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Blakely City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Blakely City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Blakely City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Blakely City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Blakely City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Blakely City’s potential claims against them. Blakely City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Blakely City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Blakely City, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Blakely City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Blakely City filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45129-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Blakely City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Blakely City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Blakely City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Blakely City, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1028. City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45129-DAP: Plaintiff Damascus City, Georgia

Damascus City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Damascus City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Damascus City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Damascus City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Damascus City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Damascus City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Damascus City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45129-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Damascus City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Damascus City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Damascus City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Damascus City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Damascus City’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Damascus City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Damascus City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Damascus City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Damascus City filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019. See City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45129-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Damascus City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Damascus City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Damascus City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Damascus City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Damascus City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Damascus City has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Damascus City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[all] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Damascus City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

But Damascus City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Damascus City, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Damascus City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Damascus City filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Blakely, Georgia et al. v. Damascus City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Damascus City, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1029. Heard County, Georgia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45130-DAP: Plaintiff Heard County, Georgia

Heard County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Heard County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Heard County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Heard County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Heard County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Heard County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Heard County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. *See Heard County, Georgia v. OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Heard County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.14% market share for Heard County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Heard County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

units shipped to Heard County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.47% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Heard County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Heard County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019. *See Heard County, Georgia v. 1030. Blount County, Tennessee et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45132-DAP: Plaintiff Blount County, Tennessee

Blount County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Blount County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Blount County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Blount County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Blount County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Blount County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. (0.03% market share for Blount County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Blount County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Blount County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019. See Blount County, Tennessee et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45132-DAP, ECF No. 1. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Tennessee law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Blount County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Tennessee law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Blount County, a municipality in Tennessee, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1031. Blount County, Tennessee et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45132-DAP: Plaintiff Jefferson County, Tennessee

Jefferson County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jefferson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Jefferson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Jefferson County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Jefferson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Jefferson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Jefferson County amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Blount County, Tennessee et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45132-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Jefferson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Jefferson County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Jefferson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Jefferson County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Jefferson County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Jefferson County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Jefferson County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Jefferson County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019. See Blount County, Tennessee et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45132-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Jefferson County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Jefferson County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Jefferson County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Jefferson County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Jefferson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Jefferson County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Jefferson County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Jefferson County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Jefferson County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Jefferson County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Jefferson County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Jefferson County’s potential claims against them. Jefferson County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Tennessee law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Jefferson County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Tennessee law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Jefferson County, a municipality in Tennessee, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Jefferson County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Jefferson County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Blount County, Tennessee et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45132-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Jefferson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Jefferson County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Jefferson County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Jefferson County, a municipality in Tennessee, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1032. Hospital Authority of Valdosta and Lowndes County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45133-DAP: Plaintiff Valdosta And Lowndes County, Hospital Authority Of D/B/A South Georgia Medical Center, Georgia

South Georgia Medical Center’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. South Georgia Medical Center failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. South Georgia Medical Center also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, South Georgia Medical Center's motion should be denied due to futility, as South Georgia Medical Center does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. South Georgia Medical Center was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, South Georgia Medical Center filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on March 12, 2019. See Hospital Authority of Valdosta and Lowndes County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45133-DAP, ECF No. 1. South Georgia Medical Center could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, South Georgia Medical Center elected not to do so. South Georgia Medical Center waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. South Georgia Medical Center's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. South Georgia Medical Center filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019. See Hospital Authority of Valdosta and Lowndes County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45133-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, South Georgia Medical Center never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating South Georgia Medical Center's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of South Georgia Medical Center's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by South Georgia Medical Center's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and South Georgia Medical Center therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But South Georgia Medical Center's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. South Georgia Medical Center, a hospital in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for South Georgia Medical Center's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. South Georgia Medical Center filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Hospital Authority of Valdosta and Lowndes County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45133-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that South Georgia Medical Center knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. South Georgia Medical Center's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. South Georgia Medical Center's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Duplicative Recovery. Jackson County Health Care Authority, a municipal health care authority, seeks leave to add the same claims and recover the same alleged damages as the related municipality, Jackson County, Alabama, a plaintiff in Jackson County, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., 1:18-op-45634-DAP. These duplicative claims are subject to dismissal and leave to amend should be denied as futile. See Section III.B.2, above; cf. Firestone Laser & Mfg. LLC v. Bristow, __ F. Supp. 3d __, 2024 WL 3819623, at *12 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 14, 2024) (dismissing claim because otherwise it would produce an impermissible double recovery).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. South Georgia Medical Center, a hospital in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1033. Jackson County Health Care Authority v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45134-DAP: Plaintiff Jackson County Health Care Authority, Alabama

Jackson County Health Care Authority's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jackson County Health Care Authority failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Jackson County Health Care Authority also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Jackson County Health Care Authority's motion should be denied due to futility, as Jackson County Health Care Authority does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Jackson County Health Care Authority was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Jackson County Health Care Authority filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on March 14, 2019. *See Jackson County Health Care Authority v. Jackson County Health Care Authority could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Jackson County Health Care Authority elected not to do so. Jackson County Health Care Authority waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Jackson County Health Care Authority's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Jackson County Health Care Authority filed its original complaint on March 14, 2019. See Jackson County Health Care Authority v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45134-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Jackson County Health Care Authority never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). The PBMs are prejudiced by Jackson County Health Care Authority’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Jackson County Health Care Authority therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Jackson County Health Care Authority’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Jackson County Health Care Authority, a hospital in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Jackson County Health Care Authority’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Jackson County Health Care Authority filed its original complaint on March 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Jackson County Health Care Authority v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45134-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Jackson County Health Care Authority knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Jackson County Health Care Authority’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Jackson County Health Care Authority’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Jackson County Health Care Authority’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Jackson County Health Care Authority sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 14, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Jackson County Health Care Authority, a hospital in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1034. City of Rainsville, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45135-DAP: Plaintiff Hammondville Town, Alabama

Hammondville Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hammondville Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hammondville Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hammondville Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Hammondville Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hammondville Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hammondville Town amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Rainsville, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45135-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hammondville Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Hammondville Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Hammondville Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hammondville Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Hammondville Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Hammondville Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Hammondville Town filed its original complaint on March 14, 2019. See City of Rainsville, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45135-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Hammondville Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Hammondville Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Hammondville Town’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. 1035. City of Rainsville, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45135-DAP: Plaintiff Rainsville City, Alabama

Rainsville City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rainsville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rainsville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rainsville City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Rainsville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Rainsville City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rainsville City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Rainsville, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45135-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Rainsville City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Rainsville City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Rainsville City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Rainsville City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Rainsville City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Rainsville City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rainsville City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Rainsville City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.38% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rainsville City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Rainsville City filed its original complaint on March 14, 2019. See City of Rainsville, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45135-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Rainsville City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Rainsville City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Rainsville City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Rainsville City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Rainsville City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Rainsville City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Rainsville City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Rainsville City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Rainsville City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Rainsville City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Rainsville City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Rainsville City’s potential claims against them. Rainsville City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Rainsville City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Rainsville City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Rainsville City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Rainsville City filed its original complaint on March 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Rainsville, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45135-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Rainsville City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Rainsville City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Rainsville City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Rainsville City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Rainsville City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 14, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Rainsville City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1036. City of Red Bay, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45136-DAP: Plaintiff Leighton Town, Alabama

Leighton Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Leighton Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Leighton Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Leighton Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Leighton Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Leighton Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Leighton Town amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Red Bay, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45136-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Leighton Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Leighton Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Leighton Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Leighton Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Leighton Town filed its original complaint on March 14, 2019. See City of Red Bay, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45136-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Leighton Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Leighton Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Leighton Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Leighton Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Leighton Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Leighton Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Leighton Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Leighton Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Leighton Town filed its original complaint on March 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Red Bay, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45136-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Leighton Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Leighton Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Leighton Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Leighton Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Leighton Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 14, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Leighton Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1037. City of Red Bay, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45136-DAP: Plaintiff Red Bay City, Alabama

Red Bay City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Red Bay City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Red Bay City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Red Bay City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Red Bay City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Red Bay City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Red Bay City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Red Bay, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45136-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Red Bay City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Red Bay City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Red Bay City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Red Bay City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Red Bay City’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Red Bay City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Red Bay City filed its original complaint on March 14, 2019. See City of Red Bay, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45136-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Red Bay City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Red Bay City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Red Bay City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Red Bay City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Red Bay City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Red Bay City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Red Bay City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Red Bay City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Red Bay City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Red Bay City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Red Bay City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Red Bay City's potential claims against them. Red Bay City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Red Bay City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Red Bay City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Red Bay City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Red Bay City filed its original complaint on March 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Red Bay, Alabama et al. v. op-45136-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Red Bay City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. 1038. City of Red Bay, Alabama et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45136-DAP: Plaintiff Russellville City, Alabama

Russellville City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Russellville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Russellville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Russellville City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Russellville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Sheffield City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheffield City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheffield City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheffield City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheffield City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al.*, Case No. 1:19-op-45136-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sheffield City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sheffield City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sheffield City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Sheffield City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Sheffield City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 14, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheffield City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1040. Iberville Parish Council v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45140-DAP: Plaintiff Iberville Parish Council, Louisiana

Iberville Parish Council’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Iberville Parish Council failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Iberville Parish Council also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Iberville Parish Council’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Iberville Parish Council does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Iberville Parish Council was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above.

Moreover, Iberville Parish Council filed its original complaint on January 15, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 14, 2019. See Iberville Parish Council v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45140-DAP, ECF No. 15. Iberville Parish Council could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Iberville Parish Council elected not to do so. Instead, Iberville Parish Council waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Iberville Parish Council's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

low to support a finding of good cause for Iberville Parish Council to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Iberville Parish Council filed its original complaint on January 15, 2019. See Iberville Parish Council v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45140-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Despite filing its case years ago, Iberville Parish Council never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Iberville Parish Council's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Iberville Parish Council's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Iberville Parish Council's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Iberville Parish Council therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Iberville Parish Council failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Iberville Parish Council's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Iberville Parish Council of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Iberville Parish Council refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Iberville Parish Council's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Iberville Parish Council's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Iberville Parish Council's potential claims against them. Iberville Parish Council's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Louisiana law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Iberville Parish Council's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Louisiana law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Iberville Parish Council, a municipality in Louisiana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Iberville Parish Council's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Iberville Parish Council filed its original complaint on January 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Iberville Parish Council v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45140-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. It is therefore indisputable that Iberville Parish Council knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Iberville Parish Council's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Iberville Parish Council's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Louisiana, public-nuisance claims are subject to an one-year limitations period. Iberville Parish Council's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Iberville Parish Council sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on January 15, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Iberville Parish Council, a municipality in Louisiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1041. City of Vestavia Hills, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45141-DAP: Plaintiff Vestavia Hills City, Alabama

Vestavia Hills City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Vestavia Hills City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Vestavia Hills City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Vestavia Hills City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Vestavia Hills City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Vestavia Hills City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Vestavia Hills City amended its complaint on March 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Vestavia Hills, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45141-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Vestavia Hills City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Vestavia Hills City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Vestavia Hills City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Vestavia Hills City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Vestavia Hills City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.002% market share for Vestavia Hills City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Vestavia Hills City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Vestavia Hills City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.35% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Vestavia Hills City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Vestavia Hills City filed its original complaint on March 14, 2019. See City of Vestavia Hills, Alabama v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45141-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Vestavia Hills City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Vestavia Hills City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Vestavia Hills City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. 1042. Jones County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45142-DAP: Plaintiff Jones County, North Carolina

Jones County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jones County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Jones County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Jones County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Jones County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Jones County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Jones County amended its complaint on June 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on March 15, 2019. See Jones County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45142-DAP, ECF No. 14. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Jones County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Jones County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Jones County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Jones County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Jones County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Jones County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Jones County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Jones County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.18% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Jones County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Jones County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Jones County filed its original complaint on February 26, 2019, but waited until December 16, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—more than nine months later. See Jones County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45142-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 16, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Jones County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Jones County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Jones County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Jones County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Jones County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Jones County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Jones County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Jones County filed its original complaint on February 26, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Jones County v. 1043. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP: Plaintiff Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center, Alabama

Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center's motion should be denied due to futility, as Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center amended its complaint on July 29, 2020, after directly filing in the MDL. See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center's deadline to amend was in 2019. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center filed its original complaint on March 15, 2019. See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). The PBMs are prejudiced by Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center, a hospital in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center filed its original complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. It is therefore indisputable that Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 15, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Attentus Mouton, LLC d/b/a Lawrence Medical Center, a hospital in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1044. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP: Plaintiff Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City, Alabama

Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur

City amended its complaint on July 29, 2020, after directly filing in the MDL. See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City filed its original complaint on March 15, 2019. See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City, a hospital in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City filed its original complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Health Care Authority of Morgan County - Decatur City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. - Decatur City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a HH Health System’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Impermissible Claim-splitting. The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville is listed as a plaintiff under four different names in The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville, et al. v. Purdue Pharm L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1. The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville is now purporting to seek leave to amend under each of those four separate names. See Moving Plaintiffs Nos. 1045–1048. The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children, Alabama

Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children's motion should be denied due to futility, as Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children's deadline to amend was in 2019. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to State a Claim. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children, a hospital in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville is listed as a plaintiff under four different names in The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville, et al. v. Purdue Pharm L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1. The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville is now purporting to seek leave to amend under each of those four separate names. See Moving Plaintiffs Nos. 1045–1048. The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children filed its original complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 15, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Huntsville Hospital for Women and Children, a hospital in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1048. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP: Plaintiff Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital, Alabama

Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital amended its complaint on July 29, 2020, after directly filing in the MDL. See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital filed its original complaint on March 15, 2019. See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital, a hospital in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville is listed as a plaintiff under four different names in The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville, et al. v. Purdue Pharm L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1. The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville is now purporting to seek leave to amend under each of those four separate names. See Moving Plaintiffs Nos. 1045–1048. The Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital filed its original complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 15, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville d/b/a Madison Hospital, a hospital in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1049. Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP: Plaintiff HH Health System-Athens Limestone, LLC d/b/a Athens Limestone Hospital, Alabama

HH Health System-Athens Limestone, LLC d/b/a Athens Limestone Hospital’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. HH Health System-Athens Limestone, LLC d/b/a Athens Limestone Hospital failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. HH Health System-Athens Limestone, LLC d/b/a Athens Limestone Hospital also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, HH Health System-Athens Limestone, LLC d/b/a Athens Limestone Hospital’s motion should be denied due to futility, as HH Health System-Athens

Limestone, LLC d/b/a Athens Limestone Hospital does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. HH Health System-Athens Limestone, LLC d/b/a Athens Limestone Hospital was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital’s deadline to amend was in 2019. HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital filed its original complaint on March 15, 2019. See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A

Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital, a hospital in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital filed its original complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Health Care Authority of the City of Huntsville et al. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45143-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 15, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. HH Health System-Shoals, LLC D/B/A Helen Keller Hospital and Red Bay Hospital, a hospital in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1052. Wooten v. Purdue Pharmaceuticals, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45145-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Coffee County, Georgia

Sheriff of Coffee County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Coffee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Coffee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Coffee County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Coffee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Coffee County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Coffee County amended its complaint on June 20, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Wooten v. Purdue Pharmaceuticals, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45145-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Coffee County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff of Coffee County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff of Coffee County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Coffee County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Coffee County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019. See Wooten v. Purdue Pharmaceuticals, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45145-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Coffee County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF

No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Coffee County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Coffee County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Coffee County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheriff of Coffee County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Coffee County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1053. Walker v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45146-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Crawford County, Georgia

Sheriff of Crawford County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Crawford County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Crawford County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Crawford County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Crawford County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Crawford County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Crawford County amended its complaint on June 20, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Walker v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45146-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Crawford County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff of Crawford County's deadline to amend was in 2019. OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sheriff of Crawford County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Crawford County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019. See Walker v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45146-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Crawford County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff of Crawford County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff of Crawford County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff of Crawford County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff of Crawford County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sheriff of Crawford County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheriff of Crawford County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sheriff of Crawford County's potential claims against them. Sheriff of Crawford County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Crawford County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. 1054. Jolley v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45147-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Harris County, Georgia

Sheriff of Harris County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Harris County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Harris County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Harris County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Harris County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Plaintiff Sheriff of Glynn County, Georgia

Sheriff of Glynn County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Glynn County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Glynn County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Glynn County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Glynn County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Glynn County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Glynn County amended its complaint on June 20, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Jump v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45155-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Glynn County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff of Glynn County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff of Glynn County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Glynn County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sheriff of Glynn County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Sheriff of Glynn County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Glynn County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Glynn County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019. See Jump v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45155-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Glynn County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Glynn County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Glynn County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Glynn County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Glynn County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff of Glynn County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff of Glynn County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff of Glynn County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff of Glynn County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sheriff of Glynn County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheriff of Glynn County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sheriff of Glynn County's potential claims against them. Sheriff of Glynn County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Glynn County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Glynn County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Sheriff of Glynn County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Glynn County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P., et al., No.

1:18-op-46115-DAP; and Jump v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-OP-45155-DAP. Sheriff of Glynn County's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheriff of Glynn County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sheriff of Glynn County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Jump v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45155-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sheriff of Glynn County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sheriff of Glynn County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sheriff of Glynn County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Glynn County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1056. County of Albany, New York v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45159-DAP: Plaintiff Albany County, New York

Albany County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Albany County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Albany County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Albany County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Albany County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Albany County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Albany County amended its complaint on June 19, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on March 25, 2019. See County of Albany, New York v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45159-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Albany County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Albany County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Albany County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Albany County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Albany County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Albany County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Albany County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Albany County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.24% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Albany County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Albany County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Albany County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Albany County began receiving those services on November 1, 2010. See id. Inasmuch as Albany County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Albany County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Albany County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Albany County filed its original complaint on February 27, 2019. See County of Albany, New York v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45159-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Albany County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Albany County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Albany County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Albany County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Albany County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Albany County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Plaintiff Filed a Separate PBM Case. Albany County previously filed an opioid case outside the MDL against the PBMs on May 6, 2024. See County of Albany, New York v. Express Scripts, Inc., et al., Case No. 1:24-cv-777 (N.D.N.Y.), ECF No. 1-1. Albany County also voluntarily dismissed its claims against the PBMs in that case. Id., ECF No. 23. By suing the PBMs outside the MDL in 2024, Albany County shows that it possessed facts to assert claims against the PBMs before it moved to amend in the MDL, precluding a showing of good cause here. See Profitt, 2024 WL 3622448, at *4 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff previously possessed documents showing underlying factual basis for proposed claim).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Albany County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Albany County filed its original complaint on February 27, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Albany, New York v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45159-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Albany County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend.

Albany County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Albany County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

1057. Bohannon v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45161-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Jeff Davis County, Georgia

Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Jeff Davis County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Jeff Davis County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Jeff Davis County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Jeff Davis County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Jeff Davis County amended its complaint on June 20, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Bohannon v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45161-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Jeff Davis County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff of Jeff Davis County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Sheriff of Jeff Davis County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Jeff Davis County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Jeff Davis County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019. See Bohannon v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45161-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Jeff Davis County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF

No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Jeff Davis County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff of Jeff Davis County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff of Jeff Davis County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff of Jeff Davis County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's potential claims against them. Sheriff of Jeff Davis County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Jeff Davis County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Jeff Davis County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. 1058. Reece v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45162-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Jones County, Georgia

Sheriff of Jones County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Jones County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Jones County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Jones County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Jones County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1059. Dean v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45163-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Laurens County, Georgia

Sheriff of Laurens County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Laurens County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Laurens County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Laurens County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Laurens County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Laurens County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019. See Dean v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45163-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Laurens County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Laurens County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Laurens County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Laurens County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Laurens County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff of Laurens County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff of Laurens County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff of Laurens County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff of Laurens County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sheriff of Laurens County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheriff of Laurens County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sheriff of Laurens County's potential claims against them. Sheriff of Laurens County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Laurens County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Laurens County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Sheriff of Laurens County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Laurens County, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, et al., No. 1:18-op-45945-DAP; and Dean v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45163-DAP. Sheriff of Laurens County's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheriff of Laurens County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sheriff of Laurens County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Dean v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45163-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sheriff of Laurens County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sheriff of Laurens County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sheriff of Laurens County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Laurens County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1060. Langford v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45164-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Murray County, Georgia

Sheriff of Murray County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Murray County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Murray County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Murray County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Murray County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Murray County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Murray County amended its complaint on June 20, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Langford v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45164-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Murray County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff of Murray County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff of Murray County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Murray County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sheriff of Murray County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Sheriff of Murray County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Murray County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Murray County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019. See Langford v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45164-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Murray County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Murray County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Murray County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Murray County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Murray County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff of Murray County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff of Murray County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff of Murray County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff of Murray County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Sheriff of Murray County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheriff of Murray County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Sheriff of Murray County’s potential claims against them. Sheriff of Murray County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Murray County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Murray County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Sheriff of Murray County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: City of Rome, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45282-DAP; and Langford v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., No. 1:19-op-45164-DAP. Sheriff of Murray County’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheriff of Murray County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sheriff of Murray County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Langford v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45164-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sheriff of Murray County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sheriff of Murray County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sheriff of Murray County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Murray County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1061. Berry v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45165-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Oconee County, Georgia

Sheriff of Oconee County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Oconee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Oconee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs.

Moreover, Sheriff of Oconee County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Oconee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Oconee County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Oconee County amended its complaint on June 20, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Berry v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45165-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Oconee County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff of Oconee County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff of Oconee County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Oconee County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Oconee County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019. See Berry v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45165-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Oconee County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Oconee County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Oconee County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Oconee County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Oconee County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff of Oconee County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff of Oconee County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff of Oconee County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff of Oconee County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sheriff of Oconee County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheriff of Oconee County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sheriff of Oconee County's potential claims against them. Sheriff of Oconee County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Oconee County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Oconee County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Oconee County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Plaintiff Sheriff of Pierce County, Georgia

Sheriff of Pierce County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Pierce County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Pierce County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Pierce County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Pierce County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged

1063. Kile v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45167-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Screven County, Georgia

Sheriff of Screven County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Screven County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Screven County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Screven County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Screven County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Screven County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Screven County amended its complaint on June 20, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Kile v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45167-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Screven County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff of Screven County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff of Screven County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Screven County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Screven County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019. See Kile v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45167-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Screven County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Screven County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Screven County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Screven County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Screven County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff of Screven County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff of Screven County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff of Screven County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff of Screven County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sheriff of Screven County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheriff of Screven County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sheriff of Screven County's potential claims against them. Sheriff of Screven County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Screven County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Screven County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheriff of Screven County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sheriff of Screven County filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Kile v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45167-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sheriff of Screven County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sheriff of Screven County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sheriff of Screven County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Screven County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1064. Scarbrough v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45168-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Tift County, Georgia

Sheriff of Tift County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Tift County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Tift County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Tift County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Tift County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1065. Royal v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45169-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Ware County, Georgia

Sheriff of Ware County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Ware County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Ware County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Ware County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Ware County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1066. Carter v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45170-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Wayne County, Georgia

Sheriff of Wayne County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Wayne County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Wayne County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Wayne County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Wayne County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1067. Aroostook County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45183-DAP: Plaintiff Aroostook County, Maine

Aroostook County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Aroostook County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Aroostook County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Aroostook County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Aroostook County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Aroostook County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Aroostook County filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 27, 2019. See Aroostook County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45183-DAP, ECF No. 57. Aroostook County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Aroostook County elected not to do so. Instead, Aroostook County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Aroostook County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Aroostook County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Aroostook County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Aroostook County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Aroostook County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Aroostook County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Aroostook County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Aroostook County's potential claims against them. Aroostook County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Aroostook County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Aroostook County, a municipality in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Aroostook County is a plaintiff in Maine. Aroostook County’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Aroostook County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Aroostook County filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Aroostook County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45183-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Aroostook County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on November 21, 2022. Aroostook County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Aroostook County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Aroostook County, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1068. Penobscot County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45184-DAP: Plaintiff Penobscot County, Maine

Penobscot County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Penobscot County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Penobscot County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Penobscot County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Penobscot County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Penobscot County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Penobscot County filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 27, 2019. See Penobscot County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45184-DAP, ECF No. 53. Penobscot County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Penobscot County elected not to do so. Instead, Penobscot County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Penobscot County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Penobscot County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.14% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Penobscot County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Penobscot County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Penobscot County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Penobscot County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Penobscot County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Penobscot County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Penobscot County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Penobscot County's potential claims against them. Penobscot County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Penobscot County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Penobscot County, a municipality in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Penobscot County is a plaintiff in Maine. Penobscot County's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Penobscot County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Penobscot County filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Penobscot County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45184-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Penobscot County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Penobscot County, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1069. Washington County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45185-DAP: Plaintiff Washington County, Maine

Washington County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Washington County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Washington County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Washington County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Washington County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Washington County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Washington County filed its original complaint on November 26, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 27, 2019. See Washington County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45185-DAP, ECF No. 57. Washington County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Washington County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.39% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Washington County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Washington County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Washington County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Washington County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Washington County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Washington County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Washington County, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1070. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45187-DAP: Plaintiff Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes, Oklahoma

Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes' untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes failed to provide notice of their proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes also lack good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because their untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes' motion should be denied due to futility, as Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes do not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to their alleged harm, their proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Oklahoma, their RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and they lack standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes were on notice of their claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes filed their original complaint on December 14, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 27, 2019. See Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45187-DAP, ECF No. 11. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes could have amended their complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes elected not to do so. Instead, Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes waited five years after their deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes' lack of diligence in pursuing their claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes' geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes' geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts' PBM "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Oklahoma law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes' delay in seeking to amend their complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Oklahoma law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes, together a single tribal government in Oklahoma, have not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to their injuries. Instead, they rely exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes seek leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in three cases: Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes v. McKesson Corporation, et al., No. 1:19-op-45187-DAP; Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes v. Purdue Pharma LP, et al., No. 1:19-op-45231-DAP; and Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes v. Watson Laboratories Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-45232-DAP. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes’ impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes are a plaintiff in Oklahoma. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes’ request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because Oklahoma’s public nuisance law does not extend to “the manufacturing, marketing, and selling of prescription opioids.” Hunter, 499 P.3d at 730; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes’ proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes filed their original complaint on December 14, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which they now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45187-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes first learned of their injury on the day they filed their original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on December 14, 2022. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes' RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes' request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes, together a single tribal government in Oklahoma, lack standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1071. City of Auburn v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45188-DAP: Plaintiff Auburn City, Maine

Auburn City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Auburn City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Auburn City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Auburn City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Auburn City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Auburn City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Auburn City filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 28, 2019. See City of Auburn v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45188-DAP, ECF No. 53. Auburn City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Auburn City elected not to do so. Instead, Auburn City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Auburn City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Auburn City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Auburn City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Auburn City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Auburn City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Auburn City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Auburn City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Auburn City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Auburn City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Auburn City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Auburn City’s potential claims against them. Auburn City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Auburn City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Auburn City, a municipality in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Auburn City is a plaintiff in Maine. Auburn City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Auburn City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Auburn City filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Auburn v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45188-DAP, ECF No. 1-15. Even assuming arguendo that Auburn City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on November 21, 2022. Auburn City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Auburn City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Auburn City, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1072. Lincoln County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45190-DAP: Plaintiff Lincoln County, Maine

Lincoln County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lincoln County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lincoln County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lincoln County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lincoln County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lincoln County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lincoln County filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 28, 2019. See Lincoln County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45190-DAP, ECF No. 53. Lincoln County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lincoln County elected not to do so. Instead, Lincoln County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lincoln County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Lincoln County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.37% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lincoln County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Lincoln County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Lincoln County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Lincoln County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Lincoln County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Lincoln County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lincoln County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Lincoln County's potential claims against them. Lincoln County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lincoln County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lincoln County, a municipality in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Lincoln County is a plaintiff in Maine. Lincoln County’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lincoln County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lincoln County filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. *See Lincoln County v. Lincoln County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lincoln County, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1073. York County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45191-DAP: Plaintiff York County, Maine

York County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. York County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. York County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, York County's motion should be denied due to futility, as York County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.
